MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S WAR DEBT STATEMENT

Ten Million Dollars to Be Paid in Silver

CHEERFUL HOUSE OF COMMONS

TRIBUTES TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

LONDON, JUNE 14.
BRITAIN IS TO MAKE A PAYMENT OF TEN MILLION DOLLARS TO THE UNITED STATES ON ACCOUNT OF THE JUNE WAR DEBT INSTALLMENT.

The amount will be paid in silver at fifty cents per fine ounce. Four million ounces of silver have been acquired from the Government of India for this purpose.

Mr. Neville Chamberlain made this announcement to-night before a very cheerful House of Commons, stating that this was exactly the offer which Britain made to the United States, as an acknowledgment of the debt.

NOT REGARDED AS DEFAULT

The Chancellor of the Exchequer expressed regret that President Roosevelt was unable to accede to the British request for a postponement of the June instalment, pending a discussion of the war debt question as a whole.

President Roosevelt had, however, accepted the part payment offer in a spirit of co-operation without prejudicing the freedom of either government in subsequent discussions.

Mr. Chamberlain pointed out that the instalment of December 15, 1932, was paid in full in the hope of paving the way to a settlement before another instalment became due.

LAUSANNE AT STAKE

It seemed impossible to contemplate the continuance of payments of this magnitude, while suspending under the Lausanne Agreements, the corresponding claims upon our debtors.

Hence further payments on that scale would have ended the Lausanne Agreements and again plunged the world into a condition of uncertainty and despair from which it was to a large extent rescued at Lausanne last year.

NO REPUDIATION

On the other hand, said the Chancellor, the British Government had the strongest objection to the taking of any course amounting to the repudiation of our obligations. Britain therefore made the offer of a payment on account as an earnest of goodwill.

Mr. Chamberlain then read a statement which has been circulated by President Roosevelt in Washington stating that it is fair and wise to postpone formal representations on the debt subject until later.

PRESIDENT'S VIEW

It is vitally necessary, says the President, that the meetings of the World Economic Conference should not be hampered by a difficult and protracted discussion of the debt problem, but in view of the British representations and in view of the fact that the present part payment is an acknowledgment of the debt itself, he declares that he has no hesitation in saying that he does not characterise the resultant situation as a default.

Loud cheers from all sides of the House greeted Mr. Neville Chamberlain's peroration on the debt agreement.

OPPOSITION PLEASED

The House was buzzing with satisfaction, the opinion being expressed that the American decision was a good augury for the success of the World Economic Conference and may prove the first step to a complete and final settlement of War Debts.

Sir Stafford Cripps, on behalf of the Labour Party, and Sir Herbert Samuel, for the Liberals, congratulated Mr. Neville Chamberlain and expressed their deep appreciation of President Roosevelt's realism.

BANDIT LEADER FOUND DEAD

Mukden, June 15.

It is reported that among a hundred odd corpses left when the Japanese routed bandits under the notorious leader, Lao Pei-feng, on the morning of Tuesday, near Shwangtze, has been found Pei Pa-tien, the chief of the captors of Mrs. Pawley and Charles Cokeran last year.—Reuter.

NON-RECOGNITION OF MANCHUKUO

STATEMENT IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

London, June 14.

Captain Anthony Eden, replying to a question by Mr. John Haslam, in the House of Commons, stated that the Advisory Committee appointed by the League to consider technical matters arising out of the Assembly resolution in reference to the non-recognition of Manchukuo, has drafted a memorandum which is being circulated to members of the League and to other governments.—Reuter.

ATTACK ON WAR DEBT DECISION

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924. Received June 15, 10.15 a.m.)

Washington, June 14.

The Republicans are seeking to connect President Roosevelt's decision on war debts with the great American private banking houses, which have been subjected to so much criticism lately because of the Morgan Enquiry.

Senator Robinson, who has declared himself strongly on the concession made to Britain, declared to-night that "this is the same Executive who takes four hundred million dollars from the Veterans and undertakes to accept ten per cent. payment from Britain."

"He is," says Senator Robinson, "following the programme of the House of Morgan, Wall Street and organised wealth."

As long as the President listens to Wall Street, that is all we shall get from Britain, the House of Morgan and organised wealth, who desire to unload Europe's debts on the American taxpayers.—Reuter.

AVIATRIX FORCED DOWN

MRS. BONNEY FOUND NEAR LINZ

Vienna, June 14.

The mystery of Mrs. Bonney, the aviatrix who was reported missing in a flight from Budapest to London on June 12, has been cleared up.

She had to make a forced landing near Linz, but intends to resume the flight to England tomorrow.—Reuter.

Boston Red Sox administered another sensational defeat to the New York Yankees to-day, when they hit up 13 runs against the Yankees' five.

This followed on their success over the American League leaders on Tuesday.

The Giants were more successful clinching the issue against Boston, while Chicago easily beat Cincinnati, Root blanking out Cincinnati.

Austin, Texas, June 14.

A reduction of one-third of the allowable production of the East Texas oilfield has been ordered by the Texas Railroad Commission and will become effective at midnight tonight.

It is estimated that the order will permit an output of between 550,000 and 575,000 barrels per day.

For several weeks past there has been approximately 820,000 barrels produced every day.—Reuter.

CROSS-PURPOSES REVEALED

FRANCE AND AMERICA AT LOGGERHEADS

FIGHT FOR FINANCIAL LEADERSHIP

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924. Received, June 15, 9.11 a.m.)

LONDON, JUNE 15.

BEHIND THE SCENES OF THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE A FIERCE CONFLICT IS BEING CARRIED ON BETWEEN FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES, REUTER'S DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT LEARNS.

The dispute is over the chairmanship of the Monetary Commission, the differences which arose yesterday still remaining unsolved.

It is now learned that both desire the chairmanship for themselves, France advancing the contention that the conferment of the chairmanship upon the United States would entail a danger of a lead being given to an inflationist policy.

Unless a settlement can be reached in discussion, presumably the question will have to be put to the vote, although both parties are desirous of avoiding such a step.

DEBT SOLUTION CLEARS THE AIR

Mr. Cordell Hull's speech awakened considerable interest as report has it that the contents were modified just before its delivery on instructions from Washington.

Particular attention was paid to the fact that it followed very closely the programme outlined in Mr. Neville Chamberlain's speech and the delegates are seeing in the situation a united Anglo-American front, the result of the temporary disposal of the war debt question.

SOME DISAPPOINTMENT

At the same time, the speech of the American delegate caused some disappointment. He was expected to be spectacular, to produce proposals for drastic measures to find a way out of the economic chaos, but he contented himself with generalities and the advocacy of adherence to the tariff truce.

Mr. Hull also insisted that world currencies must, as far as possible, be stabilised and he hinted at an international currency standard along the lines suggested before the Conference opened, namely, an entirely new international standard, of any weight of gold which the Conference chose to confer upon it.

FICTITIOUS UNIT

It would be a fictitious unit in actuality, something on the lines of the Gold Unit system adopted by the Chinese Maritime Customs.

In view of the rumours of likely advocacy of bimetalism by the United States delegate, it is interesting to note his declaration that the functions of gold and silver should be regulated within the framework of the proposed international currency standard.

LITVINOFF AND BRITISH BOYCOTT

London, June 14.

In the closing stages of to-day's plenary session of the Conference, M. Litvinoff said the Soviet would propose a resolution "to supplement the economic truce by an undertaking for the simultaneous suspension in all countries of all legislative or administrative measures of economic warfare."

Referring to the British boycott of Russian goods.

DEBT SETTLEMENT

Dr. Eduard Benes, the leader of the Czechoslovakian delegation, speaking on behalf of the Little Entente Powers, said they regarded the settlement of intergovernmental debts as a matter of the foremost consideration. He was also in favour of the earliest possible restoration of the gold standard.

Dr. Collin (Holland) doubted whether the return to the gold standard was an ideal which was possible. He strongly urged steps to prevent wide fluctuations of currencies, but, he added, the stabilisation of currencies would be doomed to failure if it was not accompanied by the free circulation of goods.

He joined Mr. Neville Chamberlain in advocating the abolition of shipping subsidies.

The adjournment followed after a short statement by Dr. Imrdi, the Hungarian Foreign Minister.

CONSIDERED BRITISH POLICY

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S SURVEY

The British Government's considered policy towards the whole range of the problems before the conference was stated by the Chancellor of Exchequer, whose speech is to be issued as a Government Paper.

Dealing with the present lack of equilibrium between commodity prices and costs, he said: "In the view of the British delegation, the solution must be found by means of a recovery in prices."

Action in various spheres would be necessary. The fundamental monetary condition of a recovery of prices is that credit should be made available by a policy of cheap money and that such credit should be actively employed. This, together with the revival of business, (Continued on Page 7.)

REPUBLICANS HOSTILE

AN ALL OR NONE ATTITUDE

Washington, June 14.

"The entire instalment should be paid, or none," said Senator Robinson, the Republican leader, condemning President Roosevelt and the Senate for accepting the British part payment in silver at fifty cents an ounce.—Reuter.

TENSION IN EUROPE

AUSTRO-GERMAN QUARREL

RELATIONS VERY STRAINED

Vienna, June 14.

Official relations between Austria and Germany are exceedingly strained as a result of the Habicht incident and the German reprisal.

Dr. Wasserbaeck, the press attaché at the Austrian Legation in Berlin, who was ordered to leave German territory immediately has been appointed Secretary of the Austrian Legation in London by Dr. Dollfuss, the Chancellor, and is proceeding to London immediately.

This journey may have something to do with the decision of Dr. Dollfuss to remain in London, though there are rumours that he has been consulting with members of the British Cabinet and that the good offices of Britain may be employed to ease the tension between Germany and Austria.

HABICHT RELEASED

Herr Habicht, the press attaché to the German Legation in Vienna, whose arrest caused the tension, has been released. He left Linz in a motor-car and was accompanied to the frontier by an Austrian police official.

Vienna activities against the Nazis continue and scores of arrests have been made, though some have since been released.—Reuter.

SIX PASSENGERS OVERBOARD

BELIEVED TO BE WAR RECRUITS

Six Chinese passengers jumped overboard from an out-going steamer as the vessel was in Lamma Channel yesterday. They were picked up and returned to the Colony by a fishing junk.

The six men are believed to be Chinese Army recruits, who exercised the privilege of changing their minds after accepting the terms of enlistment.

Their case is being investigated by the Secretariat of Chinese Affairs.

TAX ON COTTON AND WHEAT

U.S. PLAN TO CUT DOWN ACREAGE

Washington, June 15.

It is authoritatively disclosed that the Roosevelt Administration has decided to levy maximum progressive taxes around four cents a pound on cotton and from 28 to 30 cents a bushel on wheat in order to bring closer acreages of those crops.—Reuter.

AMERICA'S DEBTORS

THREE DECIDE ON DEFAULT

OTHERS FOLLOW BRITAIN

London, June 14.

The actual cost of silver transferred from the Raj to the British Government is understood to be approximately £1,600,000 sterling.

Satisfaction is expressed by the American delegates at the World Economic Conference of Britain's decision to pay her instalment of war debt which is regarded as a successful solution of the immediate crisis which threatened international co-operation.

Italy is also believed to be paying only part of her war debt instalment, whilst Czechoslovakia and Rumania are following Britain's example.

Belgium, and almost certainly France, is defaulting. Poland also won't pay and a note regarding this has been sent to the State Department by the Polish Ambassador.—Reuter.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

The Popularity of the Beret

(From a Paris Correspondent)

Nothing will kill the beret. Milliners are making the best of it. It certainly has more than nine lives and is seen everywhere, and worn at quite a new slant—well on the brow, up at the back, and hiding the hair in front.

Boaters have staged a comeback, and they are worn at such an exaggerated tilt that they are kept on apparently only by skilful manipulation and a large element of luck.

There are numerous breeds of sailors in varying materials with crushed crowns and wavy brims, much beloved by the older woman. The "Dolly Varden" chapeau, decked up with spring flowers and made of one of the new straws, is charming and romantic-looking. Some of them are tipped over the nose and have the brims hiked up in the back and backed with flowers. The French hats that mount to the back of the head, and are there adorned with a cache-peigne of beautiful flower, call for special attention. A leghorn model is made with a brim that curves over the nose in front, widens, and is pushed up right in the back. A cache-peigne is placed across the back, and a blue velvet ribbon makes a tour of the crown.

JADE ORNAMENTS

Popularity of This Chinese Stone

(From a Paris Correspondent)

Jade ornaments have been worn by beauties throughout the ages. Though its popularity may wane from time to time, invariably jade springs to the fore again, carved with new designs, symbolic of the art of the period.

Just now in Paris jade is one of the most popular stones. Set in curious styles, it is to be found in every jeweller's window. Looking at these modern presentations of the lovely green stone, it is not easy to remember that jade was worn by Chinese beauties many centuries ago. Many examples of jade are in other shades than the green with which most people are familiar; but it is the green jade which fashionable women are generally wearing.

Other jewellery novelties consist of bracelets designed in handpainted china. So broad are these ornaments, they are like circles cut from old-fashioned china flower

Now For Some Team Work to Cut Down Your Poundage

Touch the floor back of your head with the ball... then up again

BY JAC AUER

When it comes to persistent reducing, nothing excels the use of a medicine ball.

Get somebody to do a little workout with you each day for awhile. You'll both profit by the strenuous regime it puts you through.

Sit on the floor, leaning back slightly, feet apart. The object of this medicine ball exercise is to receive the ball when rolled to you, in a slightly reclining position, to swing the ball over your head as you receive it, touch the floor with it, swing up again still holding it and toss it to your little helper.

You have no idea how invigorating this exercise is. It stirs sluggish circulation, catches the imagination, introduces a bit of team work that gives zest to any exercise and in addition actually works out all of your trunk and arm muscles and calls on your leg muscles because you must keep your heels to the floor, to have the exercise perfect.

Take it easy. Have your co-exerciser roll the ball easily to you. Lift it over your head easily, raise your arms quietly, stretching them to their utmost, fall back easily. Have a small pillow ready to brace your shoulders, if you feel the need of it.

The big pull comes, of course, on the uptake. Getting the ball back over your head and throwing it to your helper is what gives the exercise. Do it for five minutes. You'll find your blood and muscles singing a spring song.

FRENCH HATS

The Newest Styles From Paris

Some stitched black satin hats are worn very high at the back of the head and dented well down in front.

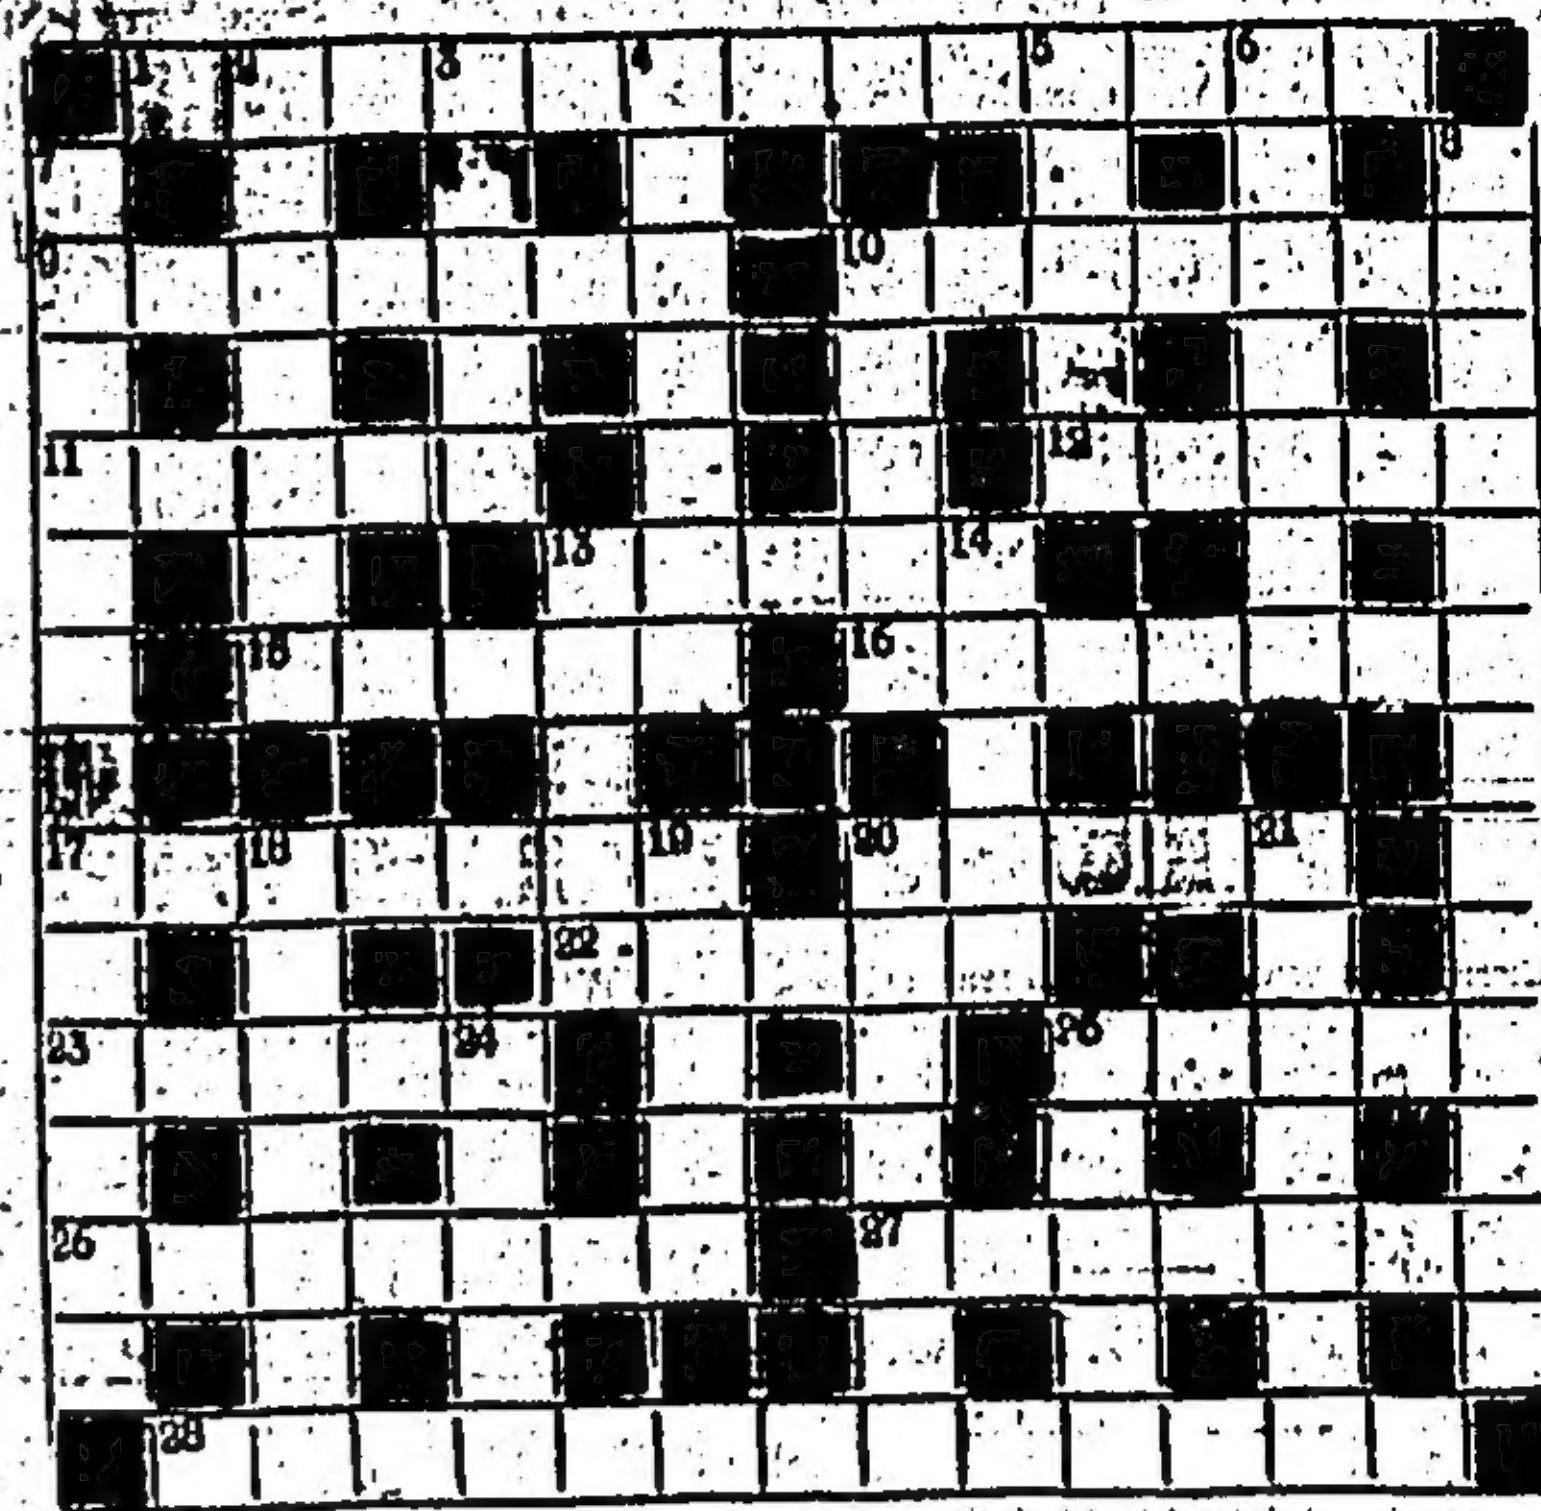

Cock and ostrich feathers trim hats, and some of these have important looking crowns and are no longer flat and small. The "cape-line"—i.e., the "grim" hats that most of the Paris milliners are featuring—are in for a summer visit. The brims are so original, they are full of kinks and crochets, however large they be, and although the limit seems to be the cart-wheel, they never hide the face. They are always cleverly tilted up, so as to form an archway, as it were, beneath which the face glows with mysterious attraction, and sometimes a nose veil is added to soften.

Sometimes the newest hats have the dear little dish crowns of 1860. The thing is that low crowns are feminine, and, above all, youthful. High crowns certainly age a woman; they add a year (to be polite) with every inch.

Welsh hats are going to be worn by Parisiennes, those of them who like the idea of a high-crowned hat. Several models are shown in shiny pleat straw, and they are obviously inspired by the national hat of the Welshwoman. Trimmings at the side with bows of ribbon or a tuft of feathers, they certainly look immensely smart, and sometimes a nose veil is added to soften.

WANG'S DEFENCE.

U.S. LOAN NOT FOR CIVIL WAR

Nanking, June 14.

In the course of a lengthy statement on the $50,000,000 loan for the purchase of American wheat and cotton, Mr. Wang Ching-wei today refutes all apprehension that the money might be used towards civil strife, saying the Government has made every effort to maintain peace since September 18, 1931.

In the next place he says the procedure followed in securing the loan was not incorrect and asserts that Mr. T. V. Soong, after signing the agreement, referred it to the Government which had it confirmed by the Central Political Council, and also referred it to the Legislative Yuan for approval.

He explains that "certain reasons" prevented Mr. Soong submitting it to the Government before signing it and says no one need fear that the Government will misuse the loan, as it will endeavour to make all its transactions public, utilising the money with the utmost care to the best advantage.—Reuter.

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONICA O'DARE, beautiful, poor and 20, is in love with DAN CARDIGAN who belongs to one of Baltimore's rich families. Monica wants to help to support her mother, her younger sister, KAY, and brother, MARK. When BILL, an older brother, is arrested at the garage where he works Monica goes to his aid. She gets in touch with CHARLES EUSTACE, handsome newcomer to town who she is sure will help her. Bill, childishly wishing to keep out of his trouble the name of the girl he was with when the robbery was planned, refuses to talk. The girl, ANGIE GILLEN, rushes to him and helps to clear his name. Monica learns Angie is about to be divorced and will then marry Bill.

CHAPTER VII

Monnie was writing down a prescription number for old Mrs. Beadle when she heard his voice. Her heart began to hammer against her ribs and she felt the warm colour surging into her cheeks. Angrily she took herself in hand. When she turned around, after serving her customer, she was quite composed.

"Hello, Dan!"
"Lo, Monnie."
He was in one of his best moods to-day, she could see that. He looked splendid in his riding clothes, sure to make the loafers on High street nudge each other and stare. Gabardine breeches, sleeveless tan sweater, carelessly knotted brown tie with a gold pin in the shape of a crop.

"Haven't seen you in ages," he told her lightly.
Monnie said, "No, Dan."
"I've been out of town," Dan went on with importance. "Dad had some business in Chicago I had to 'tend to.' He lowered his voice and it took on the caressing note Monnie knew. "Missed you, sugar," he said.

It wasn't much, but from Dan this meant a lot. She tried not to be elated but she was. Dan had missed her—he was telling her so. Why, it made everything different, made the shop, the street, the whole town, come suddenly alive.

She straightened a case of powder boxes with capable fingers and smiled at him. "Nice of you to say that, Danny. I've been frightfully busy."

Just so he wouldn't think she'd been sitting at home waiting for him, that was. Well, it was true too. She had been busy.

He ordered some cigarettes and paid for them. Somehow during the transaction he managed to get possession of one slim hand.

"Monnie, honestly, didn't you even know I'd been away?"

She glanced around nervously, glad there was no one in the store except Mr. Vernon himself, busy at the soda fountain.

"I've been rushed, Dan. Didn't you," her voice grew serious. "Didn't you hear about that difficulty of Bill?"

There it was out. She had brazenly dragged it into the open, giving Dan no opportunity to ignore it. He frowned and muttered uneasily, "I did hear some gab about it 'round town last night."

"Bill is back at work," Monnie said coolly. "Mr. Harnett was glad to have him. It all blew over."

"Well, that's fine," Dan said heartily. "I'm mighty glad." He was still prying her fingers determinedly in his. "Monnie, I just wanted to tell you—"

His voice was low and confidential and in spite of all her pride and resentment her traitorous heart responded to it. But she was not to know, that day at any rate, what Dan wanted to say to her because at that moment an imperious young person in the coolest and freshest of summer white bore down upon them.

"Dan, don't you know Mother's waiting? You said you'd be only a moment." His sister, Geraldine, Geraldine's bright eyes flicked Monnie's face for a moment. She was cool, distant, self-possessed.

"Oh, how d'ye do?"
Monnie acknowledged the salute with a slight bow. You never would have suspected that before the days of the O'Dares changed fortunes these two had linked arms together at juvenile dancing classes.

Geraldine chose to ignore Monica O'Dare nowadays because Monnie clerked in a drug store and had only one new dress a year.

"Sandra will be waiting," Dan's sister continued. "She said to be there at one and you're not even dressed."

Dan relapsed into his old defensively sullen air and followed her out of the store. Not before he had said, very low, "I'll be seeing you soon, Monnie."

She raged in her heart. So that was the way of it! He hadn't the courage to face his family with the fact that he loved her. He expected her to be content with scraps of comfort, with whispered words now and then. Well, he was mistaken! There was a pain in her chest just the same, a stricken sense of having been cheated. Sandra would see him at lunch. They would laugh and chat about nothing at all. And Sandra didn't care in the least about him—or did she?

This was a thought Monnie had been pushing into the back of her mind for weeks now. Oh, it was folly—it was utter madness! Sandra knew men in every quarter of the globe. Why should she fix her attentions on Dan Cardigan?

Just because she, Monnie, thought him the handsomest, most devastating male in the United States was no reason every other woman should regard him in the same way.

Several customers came in after that and she had to hurry, smile and be agreeable. It helped, she thought, to be what people knew as "a poor working girl."

You couldn't sit around with your mind on your troubles. And she was, really, the mainstay of the family. She got $18 a week. That, with the tiny income left by her father and with what Bill contributed, kept them going. If only—she thought for the thousandth time—

If only Mark were older. It would be five years at least until he could fend for himself. And Kay, so pretty, so alluring—Monnie would have to see that things went right for Kay.

Sometimes she felt like an animal in a cage—trapped—desperate. She could not get out! She would have to stay just where she was, to be tormented and snubbed. She would not be free until Mark and Kay were able to look after themselves. By that time, thought Monnie drearily, she would be old. Old at 25!

Oh, if only (she thought, wildly and frantically) she could get away to New York—be in a chorus, do clothes-modelling—anything! She could see herself, suave and sophisticated, wearing the most beautiful clothes, going to the theatre, being popular and mysterious. She and her mother could have an apartment. Presently some splendid man—a captain of industry, for choice—would come along. He would be older—38 or 40—he would have his faith in womankind restored by her. They would have a quiet wedding and go abroad on a honeymoon.

"Wake up, Monnie!" It was Mr. Vernon's good-natured voice.

"Daydreaming?"

She flushed and stammered. "Guess I was."

"Well, Mrs. Burke wants an ounce of senna leaves." He shuffled away, his spectacles pushed high on his forehead. He was a kindly, middle-aged man, Mr. Vernon. Belvedere referred to him as "an old back."

Monnie had no idea of his age, but roughly put it at 50. He was unfailingly kind to her and in return she gave him the best service she knew how to give. She had never known how to thank him for letting her have this job.

She filled Mrs. Burke's order, observing that Donny, the boy who attended to the soda counter, had his hands full. The high school boys and girls often came as far as Vernon's for their ham sandwiches and chocolate malted milks.

"No need to look for Kay," Kay "took" her lunch, hating it, longing to join the gay ranks thriving to the "hot dog" wagon across the way.

But it would have been too severe a drain on the family purse to let Kay buy her lunch every day. Monnie sighed again at the recollection of this one last restriction the O'Dares were subject to. Oh, it was difficult to be poor, and no mistake about it!

Presently she was free to leave for her own mid-day meal. She washed her hands at the little basin hidden by a screen in the back room. Mr. Vernon had already snatched a bite at the counter, during the lull. She glanced at herself in the cracked mirror over the bowl. She looked, she thought, pale and dragged. No wonder Dan preferred Sandra's company to hers. Sandra was always gay and witty and well dressed, rosy with sun-tan gained on the links and the tennis court.

A sort of spiritual nausea swept over Monnie with this wave of self-pity. "I hate all this," she cried rebelliously in her soul. "I must find a way out."

All the way home she thought persisted. People said often that if you wanted a thing—long enough and hard enough—you got it. Well, she would try wanting. She made a wish, like the heroine of half a hundred fairy tales, for happiness.

"I don't care how I get it or when," she murmured. "But I want to be happy before I'm old."

By happiness she meant, in the way of the young, pretty frocks, someone to admire her, excitement. Most of all, she desired freedom from this love bondage which had been like an illness since she first laid eyes on Dan Cardigan.

But try as she might she could not banish anger from her heart—anger and a sense of betrayal for Sandra Lawrence. Sandra pretended to be her friend. Sandra knew how she felt about Dan and yet seemed to be doing all she could to undermine Monnie with him.

"She says she doesn't care a thing about him," Monnie reminded herself. "I wonder!"

"What's the matter, daughter? You don't seem to have an appetite?"

"It's pretty hot. I guess that's it."

"I'll have cold things for supper," Mrs. O'Dare said. "Just a salad and some cold meat and—"

The shrilling of the telephone interrupted her. "I'll take that, Monnie. You finish your lunch."

She was back in an instant, her pale face a trifle flushed. "Monnie, someone for you. It's Mr.—it's Dan Cardigan."

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Business done, $550,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—After an all-day decline due to a firmer dollar the market rallied in the last hour due to sinking dollar and also prospects of a balanced budget and early Congress adjournment. Universal leaf tobacco declared an extra dividend of one dollar on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of fifty cents. "Hibernia" Magazine reports: Steel production at forty-seven per cent of capacity, the highest since May 12, 1931, with blast furnace operations forshadowing still further expansion. Moderate price increases are regarded as inevitable.

THE CANTON SEPARATIST MOVEMENT.

The shiftings of Chinese politics have not been so subtle in the past eighteen months that the growing cleavage between Nanking and Canton has passed unnoticed. Largely upon Canton's initiative, the breach has been rapidly widening and a complete rupture now appears imminent. The leaders of the South-West Political Council, which is really a government independent of Nanking in every important respect, barely paying lip service to the central authorities, has seized upon the conclusion of the truce agreement to challenge Chiang Kai-shek openly before the world at large. Chiang Kai-shek has responded in the customary way, attempting to buy off hostility with an offer of an additional $300,000 monthly for military expenses. He is also sending down General Wang Shao-hung, the Minister of the Interior, whose long associations with Kwangsi make him persona grata in Canton, in an effort to come to an understanding. How far Wang Shao-hung, or the $300,000, will succeed, depends largely upon what General Wang has to offer. In the present mood of the Canton leaders, it is fairly certain that they will demand Nanking recognition of the autonomy of the South-West Provinces definitely allied with Kwangtung who are cooperating in the establishment of Cantonese control. Meanwhile, Chiang Kai-shek, it is important to note, has been rapidly consolidating his position in North China. When Chang Hsueh-liang handed over his armies to the Generalissimo, he made a strong northern government ruled from Nanking a practical possibility for the first time, and the signs are that Chiang is now prepared to accept an independent Canton as an accomplished fact. The Cantonese played a large part in the creation of the government at Nanking in 1927 and have attempted to dominate Nanking ever since, generally to the detriment of the central author-ties. The attempt has been resisted, with varying success. With the Peking area also largely independent of Nanking, the policy of the government had necessarily to be unification with the co-operation of Canton. That vital factor in the situation having been removed, co-operation ceases to be of great importance, always provided an understanding can be achieved by which the northern and southern governments will work in their own spheres without attempting to usurp the authority of the other in the territory accepted as under its control. If we could be sure of the motives governing the recent actions of the South-West group, we should be prepared to agree that the separatist tendency could, finally, only have a good effect. Provided friction ceases with recognition of Canton's autonomy, provided the Cantonese are content to continue the development of their own territory, as they have done for the last two years, if the Nanking faction confines itself to the considerable task of unifying North China, real progress becomes more likely. The waste of civil conflict will be avoided, and in the apparent division there may be a greater hope for the ultimate real unification of the country. A great responsibility lies upon General Chan Chai-tong and the Canton leaders. They are well organised, are doing excellent work in the South-west and represent probably, considering the area controlled, the most efficient government in the country. If continuing their good work, securing the best out of their territory, is satisfactory to their ambitions, the independence movement should cause no alarm. And if Chiang Kai-shek, noted for his realism, can recognise and accept the realities of this situation, he should be only too willing to share the responsibilities of controlling this continent of a country populated by a quarter of the people of the globe.

England Looks to Holland

No analysis of the slum problem can be finally satisfactory that does not recognize that the question is individual and moral, as well as economic. If slums make slum dwellers, slum dwellers also make slums. Many municipalities in Britain have found that when the physical slums have been pulled down and their inhabitants housed in better places, only the fringe of the problem has been touched. Habits formed through years of living in undesirable surroundings are not easily lost. It is being suggested in Britain that countries with slum problems might find much to imitate in certain experiments that have been carried out with considerable success in recent years in Holland. In Amsterdam and The Hague the inhabitants of slums marked out for destruction are not moved immediately into normal houses. They are given a period of training in intermediate dwelling places under the supervision of people specially educated for this purpose. At The Hague there is a centre of 106 houses of two storeys on the outskirts of the city; at Amsterdam there are two centres, one of 66 and the other of 139 houses. These houses have a clubhouse for social purposes, where religious services are held and instruction is given in handicrafts and needlework. If Britain should adopt some form of the Dutch idea, it will be an interesting case of reciprocity, for the supervisors who are so important a part of the Dutch scheme are all trained in the fundamentals established by the English social reformer, Octavia Hill.

WORLD CRISIS

VI: ARE WE TO WAIT FOR THE HALF-BAKED ARMCHAIR IDEALISM.

BY FREDERICK COPE, A.M.I.E.E.

(This is the concluding article of Mr. Cope's interesting series on the world's economic and monetary problems to-day.)

The object of these Articles, has not really been to suggest a scheme, but simply to attempt to open up the subject to the average man who, so far, seems to have given little thought to the matter.

It will be interesting to observe the progress of the present World Economic Conference. Can a scheme be devised whereby constant world prosperity can be procured, and at the same time, the principles of our financial system, as we know them to-day, be retained?

Speaking with reference to this, such an authority as Mr. Montagu Norman, the Governor of the Bank of England, recently said that "the difficulties are so vast and so unlimited, that I approach the subject, not only in ignorance, but in humility."

An endeavour to solve a problem and retain a basic error is an impossible job, and will always have to be approached in this manner.

President Roosevelt might persuade the nations definitely to accept Bimetallism, or numerous other developments of that nature may occur. But even with such alterations of the present system, we are still among the leaves and twigs of the question.

CARDINAL ERROR.

They may have an insignificant influence in diminishing the effect of the error, but a complete solution is what is desired, and so long as an erroneous factor is retained, there will be no solution to the Equation.

Pitch out the error contained in the Money System, what I have called the third property of money, and out goes with it the myriad of puzzling complications and eternal arguments. Let us finally solve the physical wealth aspect of existence and get nearer to other jobs of which the World has plenty waiting for us.

Destruction of Wealth cannot be right.

Suppression of Productive Capacity cannot be right.

Repression of Man's natural and supreme desire to expand, and progress, cannot be right.

Any scheme which counteracts these wrongs, must ultimately be doomed to failure.

Some useful scheme might be evolved by the right type of delegate, and it is hoped that the Conference consists of men who will prove themselves to know more about things that can, and must, be done, than about things which cannot be done. Drastic changes cannot be completely argued out.

BRITAIN AND GOLD.

Before Britain went off the Gold Standard, there were thousands of academic reasons why she should avert the catastrophe at all costs.

Evil consequences of unknown density lay ahead. Tens of millions of Gold Reserves were sacrificed in order to avert the fearful step. Finally decision was taken for her. She had no option. She was pushed off. But what was the result? Were all the fears realised? On the contrary, any unfavourable consequences were more than outweighed. A substantial gain in fact has been realised, and not a loss as was anticipated. Britain has now no inclination to return to the position she fought so dearly to retain.

There are those who believe that a similar happy result would emerge by some sensible, but drastic, alteration to our present economic system.

In these times we cannot afford to refer cynically to Idealism. Thought and its physical expressions are advancing so quickly that the Idealism of yesterday is becoming the Reality of to-day.

The Prince of Wales, in a recent speech, made reference to the fact that our wealth to-day exceeds in abundance the extravagant visions of the Dreamers of only a few years ago.

Man has unlimited purchasing power in terms of goods and services. If gold is demanded, just as in the case of War debtors, his capacity to pay is limited.

ERRONEOUS THOUGHT.

We have been accustomed to think, erroneously, of wealth in terms of money, whereas wealth consists of goods and services. The greatest difficulty which confronts us is to sacrifice and change this standard of wealth, which has been with us all our lives. We have known no other. To change a mental standard which is inherited and inbred, is one of life's hardest tasks. In this case, however much we may dislike it and desire otherwise, "the writing is on the Wall." We are faced with that task. The quicker we can change the erroneous thought, the sooner we shall divest ourselves of its consequent penalties—our present troubles. The question is "Can we do it?"

Open the sluice gates of present finance and let Wealth flow. Society need be little altered, except by a general increase all round in physical wealth. Let us rid Society of the unpleasant feeling of uncertainty. Let us make daily work for the world a thing of pleasure, not of anxiety. Under existing conditions, business ability, hard work, honest endeavour and productivity—the things that matter—are all at a discount.

Rewards are on the knees of the money manipulators, the deflators and the inflators of Credit and values.

The business man the World over has no effectual control over his business. If he manages to escape the direct consequences of manipulators, he is in daily danger of being caught by the indirect.

Let us rid the employed man from the fear of the "axe," reductions in salary, and the insane cry of economy.

Let us immediately remove industry and commerce from the sphere of gambling. Can any man, however he may twist his logic, honestly explain to himself why the price of a share in a 100% plant is $20 (Continued on Next Column.)

The Very Idea!

HEART ACHE DAY

By Eddie Kelly, Writer.

ABOUT once every three or four months, we manage, by dint of herculean effort, going without a shave, and working day and night, to get ahead of the work that is piled on us.

On such occasions we sit back in our swivel chair, light a fire on the end of a cigar, relax, and tell the boy to bring in the baskets of correspondence from our public.

Scented and perfumed letters are laid aside to be read at leisure, accounts are thrown back into the basket, and other correspondence is passed on to our secretary.

As this is the middle of the month, we haven't got enough money for stamps to reply to those correspondents who need our fatherly advice, so we're going to print them in this column.

Here are a few sample letters, typical of those received (and grappled with) by us:

Dear Mr. Kelly.—My hand trembles, and I can scarce forbear gnawing the end off my penholder, as I set down the hideous enigma which leaps me in the face to-day, blighting my career, corroding my very soul, dragging my young life down and down, through the cankerous quagmires of calamity to the uttermost maw of abysmal ruin itself.

Twenty-four hours ago I was a happy, carefree boy, light-heartedly romping through the halls of the grand old Central British School, which I attend. To-day, I am an empty husk of a man, one who has gazed on the hollowness of life and who finds it in his broken heart to fling a mirthless and bitter, "Ha, ha!" at the taunting miseries of the universe.

Mr. Kelly, I am approaching man's estate. I have known what it is to shave. I shall be 15 years of age in a few short weeks. Yet the beings who call themselves my parents have refused to let me wear trousers. They force me to face the world in short pants. Despised and outcast, I sink along life's thoroughfare clad in my humiliation, deemed to the contempt of my fellows, and the insulting familiarity of my juniors.

Shall I go on with my life, Mr. Kelly, or shall I put an end to it?

—AN ACHING SOUL.

Dear "Aching Soul"—We would strongly advise you to go around clad in something else besides humiliation, or you may be misunderstood. Why not compromise by wearing gaiters. Despite the objection on the part of the Bishop, there is no gainsaying their sex appeal.—EDWARD KELLY.

Dear Edward Kelly.—On a point of etiquette, should I accept the offer of my brother's talpan to teach me how to play the yo-yo?—ROSIE GOLD-DIGGER.

Dear Rosie.—Yo-yoing is simply not done with talpans. Why not get him to teach you how to play "Ring, a Ring, for Rosie."—EDWARD KELLY.

Dear Eddie.—I am crazy about two young men, one in the shipping business and the other a bank clerk, but two other boys, one living on the Peak and the other at Kowloon enjoy my company. I see another man, who is third officer on a Dollar boat, every time the ship is in port, and I would like your help to tell me which gentleman friend I should have.—ANGELINA.

Dear Angelina.—Take our advice and leave them all alone. Take to gin instead.

Dear Mr. Kelly.—Are you really and truly married, or do you say so in your column just for a joke.—CURIOUS.

Dear Curious.—Ask the wife.—EDWARD KELLY.

to-day, rises to $120, and drops down to $3 a short time after. If gamble we must, and if we have not sufficient methods already, let us invent some more, but do not let one man gamble on another man's legitimate daily bread and existence.

Even the super-financier will benefit under a new system. The very system they champion, like some vicious brute, has savagely turned on them. Some of the most important world financiers are to-day experiencing the agonizing ordeal of being under suspicion and are facing Enquiry after Enquiry.

THE ALTERNATIVE. Alternatively, are we to delay too long in putting our house in order? Are we to wait until the patience of the world is exhausted, when in desperation it will accept an experiment, based on some half-baked armchair idealism, where we shall all probably move by numbers and have the freakish moral standards of a few air-brained cranks and lop-sided fanatics pushed down our throats. Even the Shirt Organisations under a condition of a waiting economic life cannot be expected to stare it off indefinitely.

WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

ness confidence, must form an indispensable background of trade recovery.

BANK ACTION.

Central banks should, therefore, undertake to co-operate with a view to securing the monetary conditions required for a rise in prices.

In order that their action may have the desired effect, the policy of cheap money should be clearly announced and vigorously pursued.

Experience in recent months has shown that cheap money, in itself, may not be enough to achieve the desired end rapidly unless means are taken to ensure that the credit made available is actively employed. The question of whether governments can actively assist in this matter by schemes of governmental capital expenditure will also require consideration. The United Kingdom delegation will be very ready to examine, with other delegations, how far employment can be stimulated by such action.

EXCHANGE STABILITY.

Referring to the great importance to international trade of the stability of exchange rates, he said that that must necessarily be attempted in two stages:

The immediate objective should be to secure approximate stability between the currencies of the principal countries of the world which would be achieved in so far as the principal countries used their resources to counteract fluctuations in the value of their currency caused by temporary movements of capital rather than by fundamental economic factors.

The first stage should be dealt with immediately.

GOLD STANDARD.

As regards the second stage, the United Kingdom delegation endorsed the view that the ultimate aim of monetary policy should be the restoration of a satisfactory international standard and there is no doubt that the gold standard seems to be generally acceptable.

The time when exchanges are at parity and at which a return to gold could safely be made, must fall to be determined by the proper authorities in each country separately.

After stating the conditions under which the United Kingdom would feel justified in returning to the gold standard he dealt with the abolition of exchange restrictions and expressed the hope that the conference would take positive action to overcome the exchange difficulties which have given rise to those restrictions.

PRICE LEVEL INFLUENCE.

Rises in the wholesale prices of foodstuffs and raw materials and an increase of world trade would contribute powerfully to reduce these difficulties and would assist in bringing to an end both the standstill arrangements in respect of short term debt and the transfer difficulties as regards external indebtedness as a whole.

These exchange and transfer difficulties would also be greatly diminished by a resumption of normal international lending.

Indeed a revival of world trade depended largely upon the renewal of the international flow of capital and every effort should be made to restore the stability and confidence required to render this possible.

TRAFFIC WALLS.

Referring to the growing obstacles to international trade, he expressed willingness to examine the proposal for attaining a reduction of excessive tariffs by multilateral action.

Any such proposal must be effective in securing really tangible reductions of excessive tariffs, must commend a sufficiently general measure of support and cover a wide enough area not to impose upon the low tariff countries disproportionate sacrifices and must not have injurious repercussions or lead to tariff wars or other economic hostilities.

BILATERAL FACTS.

In the United Kingdom's view, the reduction of customs tariffs can best be achieved by a series of bilateral agreements, which the conference should do all in its power to promote. These agreements should be valid for at least some years to come. With this aim in view commercial treaties should not be terminated before the tariff negotiations are undertaken and then only after every effort has been made to reach agreements by negotiation.

Proceeding, he said the United Kingdom delegation are strongly in favour of the progressive abolition

A Chase, Proposal and Acceptance

THE HAPPY MAN'S OWN STORY

Wedding bells will ring in July for the Hon. Eileen Hood, sister of Lord Bridport, and Mr. David Lawrence Baker, of Letcombe Manor; Wantage, whose romantic engagement has just been announced.

Mr. Baker and Miss Hood have been friends for some time. Then Miss Hood planned to go on a trip to see her brother, Lord Bridport, who is serving with the Fleet at Malta. It meant that she would be away for some months.

"Something had to be done about it," Mr. Baker confessed. "Miss Hood was already at Southampton ready to sail, and her luggage was on board."

"I chased after her by train, found her at an hotel, proposed, was accepted, and you can guess it did not take me long to get her luggage off that boat."

The wedding is to take place in the third week in July either in London or from Miss Hood's home at Richmond.

Miss Hood is a descendant of the eighteenth century Admiral Hood. She is fond of flying and is a splendid horsewoman.

Mr. David Baker, a former Master of the Fowey (Cornwall) Harrier, is grandson of Lady Lylo, of Tate and Lyle.

An "epidemic" of street football has seized Seville. In every street and square, youths and boys have been playing "el futbol" with tremendous energy—sometimes to the annoyance of more elderly passers-by.

So word was given to the police: "Street football must stop."

In 24 hours the police seized 7 regulation soccer balls, and 200 rubber balls which were being used for football.

The confiscated balls are to be sent to children's homes.—Reuter.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

REPROVE THY FRIEND PRIVATELY; COMMEND HIM PUBLICLY.—Solon.

Mr. B. W. Paul will speak on "The Unseen World" at the usual weekly public lecture of the Hongkong Lodge, The Theosophical Society, 17, Queen's Road Central, to-day at 8 p.m. This will be the last public lecture of the season. All interested will be welcome.

NATIONAL TRANSPORT DEMAND

Workers As Directors

What several speakers described as the most important business before this year's conference of the Railway Clerks' Association gave rise to a lively discussion between two contending schools of Socialists as to the share which should be claimed by the actual workers in the control of nationalised industry.

The question came up on the executive report as to the establishment of a National Transport Board—co-ordinating—railways, road motors, canals, coastal and Continental steamship services, and aerial navigation. That such a scheme must be adopted before long by Parliament was taken for granted by all the speakers.

Mr. Walkden, the general secretary of the Association, submitting the executive's proposals, declared that the principle of combined national transport was now accepted by all progressive people as a public necessity.

The present competition between rival forms of conveyance, he said, was wasteful and unsatisfactory in every way.

Sir Eric Geddes in 1921 said that grouping would solve the difficulties of the railway companies, but his optimism had not been justified. Now pooling was being tried, but Mr. Walkden argued that this, again, was not enough as it would give the companies monopolistic power without responsibility and would neither redeem their plight nor satisfy the public.

RUSSIAN TEST.

Mr. Walkden turned to the vexed question of workers' control, which is agitating both sections of the Labour movement. It was discussed at great length at the Labour Party's conference at Leicester last year, and arguments then advanced were repeated with varying phrase but identical effect by to-day's debaters.

Mr. Walkden stood for the principle that the men appointed to control should be those best fitted for the work. The proposal that the people in an industry should control it was not Socialism, he said, but Syndicalism. It had been tried by the Soviets in Russia and had been found wanting.

On another point of the controversy he took the view that trade union representatives appointed to managing boards should follow the example of Mr. Cliff of the Transport Workers Union, who on accepting an appointment on the London Traffic Board resigned his connexion with the union.

WHY FIFTY-FIFTY?

Replying to this official view, a forcible delegate from Liverpool proposed that the Executive's report should be referred back, and that the conference should declare for workers' representation on the National Transport Board to the extent of not less than 50 per cent.

Mr. Wright, of Norwich, asked why the proportion of workers' representatives should be fixed at 50 per cent., which would presumably reduce directorates to faction fights between the two classes of directors.

Mr. Walkden, however, declared that if the amendment were carried this "fatuous decision" would be broadcast against them, and the public would reject the whole proposal.

The natural result of his effective answer was an overwhelming victory for the Executive.

They were equally successful in a discussion, in camera, of the Irish strike, when, after a detailed explanation of their policy, only three votes were recorded against them.

A new 100-kilowatt radio station costing £100,000 is to be erected shortly in Madrid, according to a Home Office announcement.

The existing station is a private concern, but the new one will be entirely under state control. Income from licences will go to defray the cost of construction.—Reuter.

A workman at the Taikee Docks yesterday was injured through falling from a wooden stage while at work on the s.s. Tascari.

Surprised by the inmates, a cat burglar fell from the first floor of No. 72, Yu Fook St., Samshulpo early this morning, and was conveyed to Hospital suffering from severe injuries.

BIG TRAFFIC IN TAX STAMPS

10,000 VANISH FROM SOMERSET HOUSE

CONFESSIONS BY 145 PERSONS

The fraudulent use of income-tax stamps on a large scale was described at Bow-street Police Court.

William Niver, aged 52, a printer's assistant, of Britannia-street, Hoxton; William Charles Maloy, aged 55, warehouseman, of Helmet-row, Finsbury; Henry Albert Donyer, aged 56, printer's assistant, of Cruden-street, Islington; Francis Whitelaw, aged 55, printer's assistant, of Shaftesbury-street, E. C.; Joseph Raffoni, aged 45, a stereotyper, of Leppow-road, Clapham; and David Newson, aged 59, a porter at Somerset House, were charged with being concerned with others in stealing since 1917 cancelled income-tax stamps at Somerset House.

There were alternative charges of receiving.

At an earlier hearing it was said that the total amount involved was £2,000.

Mr. Todd-Jones (prosecuting) asked for Niver to be discharged as he was required for a witness. He had furnished all the information in his power.

Niver was then discharged.

Mr. Todd-Jones said that Newson was a porter employed at Somerset House by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, and the other defendants worked in various newspaper offices. As weekly wage earners employed by way of manual labour they enjoyed a privilege which other taxpayers did not possess of paying their income-tax by 13 weekly instalments by means of special stamps stuck on cards. At the end of the 13 weeks the cards were sent to the collector of taxes and the stamps were cancelled.

About the middle of 1931, he said, a card was noticed on receipt at Somerset House to bear stamps of a doubtful value. An investigation had been going on ever since.

250 INTERVIEWS.

"It has been necessary," said Mr. Todd-Jones, "to examine over 100,000 cards and have over 250 interviews. As a result it has been found that 145 persons had on their cards stamps which had been stolen, removed from the cards on which they were fixed, cleaned and then used again."

These 145 persons, he said, confessed that they had done this and offered to repay the money. Proceedings were not being taken against them, but they would have to pay for the stamps.

Referring to the distributors, Mr. Todd-Jones said that it appeared that in a number of newspaper offices there had been one or two persons who had trafficked in these stamps, selling them to their mates, sometimes at a profit.

Mr. Todd-Jones said that Newson had been employed at Somerset House since 1911, and his wages were now £2 11s. a week. His duties took him to a room in which the stamp cards were burned. In a statement made to the authorities he said that in 1917 he was sent into the room to clear up and took two bundles of cards bearing stamps which had not been properly cancelled. He took them home thinking that might be of value to collectors, and they remained hidden away in a cupboard for six or seven years. All he received for their sale was £30.

The two-bundles mentioned by Newson, said Mr. Todd-Jones, would contain about 10,000 stamps.

Mr. Todd-Jones said that Whitelaw's salary had been £452 a year. He had distributed stamps which he said he bought from Newson to the face value of £1,004. Raffoni's wages had been £232 a year, but he had been out of employment since the discovery of these offences. He had distributed stamps value £512 to twenty persons.

Donyer's salary had been £430 a year and he had sold stamps worth £68 to five men. Maloy, who had worked on a London newspaper for forty years and earned £219 a year, had distributed stamps worth £11.

Newson was sentenced to six months in the second division, and Whitelaw, Raffoni and Donyer to three months in the second division.

Maloy was fined £5 or 28 days.

A REMARKABLE INVESTIGATION

QUESTIONNAIRE SENT FROM UNIVERSITY

The Department of Psychology at the University of London is issuing a questionnaire, which consists of 32 "propositions" dealing with progressive thought, on which the recipient is required to record his or her attitude. They include such varied subjects as sexual freedom, birth control, Communism, Anarchism, abortion, gymnosophy, refusal of military service and sterilisation.

Accompanying it is a printed form signed by J. C. Flugel (Assistant Professor of Psychology) and Pryns Hopkins (Hon. Lecturer in Psychology). The statement reads, "A research is being conducted by some members of the staff of this College into the overlap between various 'progressive' 'advanced' or 'unorthodox' movements, i.e., the question how far those who sympathise with one such movement tend to support (or to oppose) certain other movements. The investigators are not concerned with the merits or defects of any such movements, but solely with the facts concerning the above-mentioned overlap."

Mr. Pryns Hopkins told a Press representative that the idea was conceived eighteen months ago. "A preliminary test was carried out on the students of the University," he said, "and as a result we decided to make this investigation. The results will be carefully studied and every combination of opinion will be worked out."

AMAZING SPEY ROYAL VICTORY

43 SHOTS

YACHT CLUBPOLICE SUCCESSES IN CHAMPIONSHIP

LATEST FIXTURES

Some astonishing bowls was seen on the Police Green yesterday, when the Craighower rink beat the Yacht Club in the Spey Royal Cup by 43 shots to six.This is probably the severest defeat ever inflicted on a team in this competition and the achievement was due entirely to the remarkable team work of the winners.Composed of G. L. Buchanan
(No. 1), B. W. Bradbury (No. 2), H.
Beer (No. 3) and U. M. Omar (skip), the "Craig" rink maintained such consistent accuracy that 4's and 3's were regularly registered.The 16th head was tragic for the Yacht Club viewpoint when Craighower scored a seven, but throughout there was only one rink in it as was shown by the way Craighower recorded 4's at the 3rd, 11th, 12th, 18th and 21st heads.Skipped by A. Macfarlane, the Yacht Club four strove hard to recover lost ground, but intermittent singles and a two on the 17th head were their only rewards.
They lay shot wood on the 5th, 7th, 9th and 19th heads.The result—task in eliminating J. Fraser of the K.C.C. reaching his points on the 18th head with Fraser totalling only eight.Luz held the lead from the first few heads and never relaxed his grip.

MAIR BEATEN.

W. Mair, Police skip received a set-back when he was ousted by his club-mate A. R. Clarke. Clarke looked a certain loser when Mair went into a lead of 12-6, but the former recovered cleverly, overhauled his opponent and took the lead with a three. After reaching a dozen points, Mair failed to score on another head, Clarke going out to his points with a series of singles and two's.

PERKINS CONSISTENT.

Steadiness earned T. Perkins, another Police player his game against J. Basto of the Recreation, and in winning 21-17 achieved a well deserved success.Very little divided the contenders throughout, but Perkins was constantly the more reliable bowler and proved an adept in extricating himself from unhappy positions.At the 21st Perkins needed one shot for game, and he obtained this with a beautifully delivered wood on the 22nd head.

TO-DAY'S MATCH.

Only one championship match is arranged for this afternoon.
E. G. Fletcher, well known all-round sportsman will meet R. F.

will meet.The Dock team is:

ARGUMENT IS IRRELEVANTL.B.W. RULE ROOT CAUSE
OF CRICKET TROUBLEThat the critics have placed too much importance to the dangers or unsportsmanship of "body-line" bowling and are ignoring the root cause of the trouble with cricket to-day is the contention of Mr.
Howard Marshall in an interesting article in the London Telegraph.

In it Marshall states:

County batmen will dislike this article intensely. A pity, but it cannot be helped; the batsman, it seems to me, has already had his fair share of consideration. Now it is the bowler's turn; and when I speak of bowlers I do not necessarily mean Larwood. It will be difficult, though, to write a general cricket article this summer without bringing Larwood into it somewhere. Body-line bowling, leg-theory, the whole controversy has been the Australian controvery is bound to break out again.
That it is a dreary business I think most of us are agreed, and that leg-theory, carried to extremes, is likely to be harmful to cricket is generally accepted.What I cannot understand is the way most critics, and Australian critics in particular, have approached the controversy. The savage attack which has been made upon Jardine and Larwood are surely as irrelevant as they are illogical; what is needed is not legislation to restrict leg-theory, but an inquiry into those principles of modern bowling which have produced body-line bowling and its natural consequence.

CAUSE OF DULL CRICKET.

If, as many of us believe, all is not well with cricket to-day, we must seek the cause instead of blacking childishly over the effects.The cause, as I see it, lies in the L.B.W. rule, which allows the batsman to use his legs as a second line of defence against balls which pitch outside the wicket. This rule, as Mr.
R. H. Lyttelton argued so ably in his book on the subject, is at the root of all our troubles, from dull cricket and drawn matches to the exaggerated development of leg-theory attack.Unfortunately, the principle of covering-up in defence is now firmly established, and we find even schoolboys sticking their right legs across as a protection against the break-back of balls outside the off-stump.
"There is nothing wrong or contrary to the spirit of the game," wrote the distinguished batsman, Mr. D. J.
Knight, "in bringing the legs back together in front of the wicket and behind the bat to act as an extra defence, so long as the ball has pitched off the wicket."Now there is something radically wrong here. Older cricketers hid other views, and that great player,
W. G. Grace, who was born in 1790, is quoted by the Rev. James Pycroft as saying: "The law of L.B.W. was not made or wanted till King, one of our best hitters, was shabby enough to get his leg in the way and take advantage of the bowlers."Shabby—that is the significant word, and to my mind it sums up the whole situation. Cricket is a game intended to be fought out with two weapons, the ball and the bat, and when the batsman introduces his pads deliberately as an additional weapon he is taking a shabby advantage of his opponent.This, at any rate, was still the general attitude fifty years ago, and in 1897, at the first meeting of the Cricket Council, Lord Harris said that "gentlemen of the older cricket school were decidedly of opinion that some alteration was required in the law of L.B.W."As a result of this meeting a subcommittee was appointed to inquire into the matter, and they passed a resolution to the effect that "the

AFTER 4,000
YEARSEGYPTIAN TOMB UNEARTHED

Cairo, May 23.

A large and very fine Mastaba (Pharaonic tomb) belonging to the Chief Priest of Ptah at Memphis, with the burial walls of the chamber covered with no fewer than 200 columns of hieroglyphic text, has been discovered by an expedition of the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York at Light in Upper Egypt. This is the site of the Pyramids of the first two Kings of the Twelfth Dynasty (2,000 B.C.).

The name of the owner of this magnificent tomb is Senwosret-Ankh. There is an unusually large chapel. The hieroglyphic texts are incised in limestone and painted in blue.

Meanwhile, at Giza, the Tombs of the Seven Sons of Chephren, the builder of the Second Pyramid, who married the daughter of Cheops, have been discovered by Professor Selim Hassan, excavating on behalf of the Egyptian University. He has also discovered the tomb intact of a high dignitary of the Fifth Dynasty, about 2,500 B.C.

MR. HENDERSON'S
PEACE PRIZECARNEGIE AWARD SURPRISE

Geneva.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, who has been awarded a Carnegie prize, value £2,200, for "promoting peace" was recently interviewed by Reuter's correspondent. He said that the intimation that the board of directors of the Carnegie Foundation had been good enough to award him the prize, came as a complete surprise.

"Naturally it gives me and undoubtedly will give my family great gratification that my work for peace, and efforts as president of the Disarmament Conference should have been recognised in this way," declared Mr. Henderson.

The award was made in recognition of Mr. Henderson's work for the cause of peace and disarmament and for the "energy, talent and impartiality" which he has displayed since becoming President of the Disarmament Conference.—Reuter.

GOLD & SILVER
DISCOVERYBOSNIA PEASANTS'
TREASURE TROVE

Belgrade.

Peasants digging up the roots of ancient oak trees Near Mashtica, Bosnia, found an earthen pot filled with gold and silver coins. The pot weighed twenty pounds.

The peasants took it to the police and claimed one-third as treasure trove. The pot was found to contain old Roman and Greek coins of great value.

When the police went to investigate the scene of the find they discovered that 150 peasants had assembled and were digging as hard as they could around the spot where the coins had been found.

Many further discoveries were made, including ancient marble slabs, some bearing inscriptions, the foundations of several houses and other buildings, several vases, weapons, implements and other objects, proving that a large and prosperous Roman settlement had occupied the site at one time.

Experts from Banja Luka museum have rushed to the spot and excavations are being continued by the peasants under the control of the gendarmes.—Reuter.

WARDROBE SCENE
IN LOCAL COURT.JUDGE INSPECTS FIT OF JACKETS

The Supreme Court presented somewhat the aspect of a tailoring establishment yesterday afternoon when, in the course of a dry-cleaning dispute, the Puleno Judge and two solicitors spent a considerable time in feeling, smelling, and poring over portions of male attire.

The proceedings were further enlivened by the spectacle of the plaintiff—donning—a number of jackets for inspection of the fit by the judicial eye.

Mr. W. G. Fischer, of Reuter, Broeckmann, and Co., well-known as a local amateur Jockey, was the plaintiff, and he claimed $414.70 from the International Dry Cleaning Co., in respect of four tweed suits and one palm beach suit, which he alleged they had ruined. In his statement of claim Mr. Fischer alleged that defendants had not dry-cleaned the garments, but had negligently washed them in soap and water, with the result that they had lost their shape and texture, and the colours had been spoilt.

Mr. W. J. Armstrong, of Messrs. Deacons, represented plaintiff, and Mr. J. B. Prentis, of Hastings and Co., appeared for defendants.

A "Cut" Price.

Plaintiff, in evidence, said one of the suits cost him 450 marks in Berlin, which was equivalent to £18 or £19. He added, "I paid for the cut."

The Judge (Mr. R. E. Lindsell): You would not pay as much as that in London.

Mr. Armstrong: I don't know my Lord. What about Savile Row?

Plaintiff said the suit was in very good condition before he sent it to be dry-cleaned. At the request of Mr. Armstrong he took off his jacket and put on the jacket of the suit under discussion, explaining where the garment failed to attain the perfect fit which it had before. Another suit which was similarly spoilt was made in Paris, and the present value of the clothes was really fictitious because he could only wear them until they could be replaced. As he was going on his holidays in a week, this placed him in a very awkward position.

A Stable Figure.

Mr. Prentis: When were you measured for these suits?

Witness: About seven years ago. And has your figure not altered in that time?—Not at all. My weight is the same.

The Judge: Your figure has not altered at all in seven years? You are lucky! (Laughter).

Mr. Prentis later said: Your black suit appears to fit you well.

The Judge: You think so? I don't.

Mr. Prentis referred to the advantages of a pure wool suit as against a mixture of wool and cotton, in that it would not become shiny.

His Lordship: I don't think I can ever have had a wool suit. (Laughter).

Mr. Prentis: Would you be prepared to have your other palm beach suit cleaned to see if it turns out the same?

Plaintiff: I would not send any more suits to the International Dry Cleaning Co.

Mr. Prentis: Well would you have it done by the same dry-cleaning process?

Mr. Armstrong (for plaintiff): Yes, if my friend is prepared to pay the proper charge.

Mr. Armstrong said he had brought Mr. W. W. Hirst, of the Steam Laundry Co., to give expert evidence.

Mr. Prentis replied that he had had such short notice that he had been unable so far to secure an expert for the defence, but he hoped to be able to do so if the case were adjourned.

The Greater Hardship.

The Judge: I think it becomes more and more clear, Mr. Armstrong, that if your client intends to proceed with his claim, the clothes must remain at the court.

Mr. Armstrong: We can leave some, but I cannot allow my client to go for his holidays in blankets. (Laughter).

The Judge: It is not fair to the defence to let the clothes go out of court. It may be a hardship for the plaintiff but it would be a greater hardship on the defence.

Mr. Hirst gave evidence and said there was no doubt, in his opinion, that the garments had been washed with chemical soap.

The cross-examination of this witness was reserved until tomorrow, the case being adjourned to that day.

Mr. Armstrong intimated that his client might be compelled to abandon his claim on some of the clothes in order to take them away. He asked that they be left with the Clerk of the Court so as to be accessible.

The Judge: I don't know whether the Clerk has any place sufficiently warm and dry.

It was decided that Mr. Armstrong should retain the clothes until Mr. Fischer, with the aid of his wife, should decide which to take and which to leave.

THE AMERICAN PROPOSALS

secondly, the ultimate restoration of gold was demanded. Conditions necessary to Great Britain's return to gold were: firstly, a rise in the level of prices so as to restore the equilibrium between prices and costs; secondly, the removal of the conditions which caused its breakdown; thirdly, the greatest possible prevention of the fluctuation of the purchasing power of gold.

Dealing with exchange restrictions, Mr. Chamberlain urged the Conference to deal with these questions through, among other things, the resumption of normal international trading and advised reduction of excessive customs tariffs. The protective element of any tariff should not exceed what was necessary to put the domestic producer on an equal footing with the foreigner. Great Britain was ready to co-operate in multilateral action for tariff reduction. But reduction of tariffs was best achievable by a series of bilateral agreements.

Such reductions could be given the fullest effect by the application of most favoured nation clauses, but such clauses could not be applied unless the nations receiving their advantages themselves were prepared to adopt a reasonable attitude towards lowering tariffs.

Attacks Subsidy Plan.

There should be a clear distinction between the arbitrarily imposed and protective quota (which should be progressively abolished) and quotas imposed by international agreement, he declared. Governmental subsidies, particularly to shipping, should be reduced and eventually abolished by international agreement, he concluded. When the British minister had ended, he was loudly applauded.

Anxious for Reduction.

M. Hymans said that Belgium considered monetary stabilisation essential to the re-establishment of the international gold standard, the normal functioning of which Belgium had done nothing to hinder.

Belgium was ready to collaborate towards a gradual abolition of all quantitative restrictions on imports. It was necessary that the small powers should have commercial freedom to live and it was logical and legitimate that the most favoured nation clause should be abandoned.

Mr. Cordell Hull, American delegate, and M. Litvinoff, of Soviet Russia, are speaking at the afternoon session.

The Hermit Policy

Mr. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, delivered his postponed speech this afternoon. He was listened to with the same keen interest as was Mr. Chamberlain earlier in the day.

Beginning with a reference to the "panic ridden world" seeking leadership from the Conference, he proceeded to comment on the attitude of all nations who, ignoring all realities, strenuously pursued a policy of economic isolation, each futilely and foolishly striving to lead a hermit's life.

Drawing a gloomy picture of the world's chaotic experiences in recent years, he declared that its peoples were worse off and more insecure than twelve years ago. The Conference should proclaim that economic nationalism, as imposed upon various nations, was a discredited policy. It must turn aside from those who insist that the world continue this discredited policy.

While each nation, to a moderate extent, could restore conditions by suitable steps, there was an equal necessity for an international economic programme.

A Readjustment.

Mr. Hull recommended a policy of gradual and careful readjustment of excessive tariffs and other trade barriers to a moderate level,

CHINESE INDUSTRY.

MR. TSENG FLIES IN "HOME-MADE" PLANE

Shanghai, June 14. A new page in the history of Chinese aeronautical development was recorded yesterday afternoon when Mr. Tseng Yi-ching, Head of the aeronautical establishment of the Naval Ministry, went up in the sea-plane, "Kiang Feng," built by himself in preparation for a trip through seven provinces.

The plane circled the city for more than two hours, distributing handbills encouraging the Chinese people to build their own aeroplanes.—Reuter.

which were not contemplated and unreasonable; adjustment of excessive competitive imports or monopolistic price advantages at home. A preliminary step towards co-operation would be an immediate general adherence to a tariff truce. The Conference must also face the problem of a permanent international monetary standard and lay down the proper function of metal, gold and silver, in operation on such a standard. Coincidentally, measures should be taken to remove restrictions on foreign exchange. The American delegation was prepared to offer concrete suggestions on all these questions.

The Soviet Speaks.

It was obvious that both the man and his speech attracted curious interest when Mr. Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, took the floor.

Speaking in fluent English, he devoted a large portion of his statement to a comparison of the chaotic conditions of the rest of the world with conditions in Russia, which, he declared, were practically free of all symptoms from which others suffered. Such things as

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES:

Leo Carrillo recently took the longest bath in his life. He was in the tub six hours, but not for sanitary purposes. It was all for a scene in Paramount's "The Broken Wing" now showing at the Queen's Theatre.

The tub in which Carrillo took his protracted bath was a wine press and the water was especially heated for him.

Leo Carrillo is one of five actors with Spanish names and lineage who have important speaking parts in "The Broken Wing." Every effort was made to give the picture an authentic touch of realism in its cast of characters as well as in its scenic atmosphere. Carrillo played on the stage in a recent presentation of the drama, the same bandit role he plays in the picture.

"The Greek Had a Word for Them"

Years ago, fifteen years ago, to be exact, there was a very pretty little blonde child with long golden curls who was always cropping up in pictures. She was one of the picture very pretty, very innocent movie-children, and when she disappeared from the screen, it might have been taken for granted that she had gone to heaven because she was so good.

But she has lately reappeared in the person of Madge Evans and anyone who had that "too good to live" idea has only to see her as one of the three merry maids of Broadway in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Greek Had a Word for Them" to realize that it wasn't that at all. This United Artists picture is showing at the King's Theatre.

If you want to remember what Madge Evans looked like back when she was a child star, just remember the small girl with muffs and ringlets who sits on top of the cake of Fairy Soap. That was Madge Evans. Now Madge Evans is a tall, slim young woman, still blonde, but blonde in a totally different way, a way that enables her to play her gold-digging role in "The Greek Had a Word for Them" to the taste of every millionaire in the picture.

"Arsene Lupin"

The appearance together of John Barrymore, and his equally illustrious brother, Lionel, in "Arsene Lupin" which will be shown at the Oriental Theatre on Friday and Saturday, is a cause for jubilation for those filmgoers who have been looking for something different and above the average in the way of screen fare.

Here we have two of the cinema's most expert proponents of the art of dramatic acting, brilliant characterization and sophisticated comedy, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer may be congratulated on providing the two stars with a vehicle in every way worthy of their talents. For "Arsene Lupin" the engrossing, often intensely dramatic, but always extremely amusing story of the suave and debonair thief who poses as a French nobleman and leads an infuriated and bewildered detective in a merry chase about the haunts of Paris, has just those elements of rapid-action plot movement, romantic love interest and smart humour which the two celebrated Barrymore brothers are so well equipped to handle.

"Clear all Wires"

Stage actors coming to the screen should know the work of a film cutter. It gives more knowledge of movements, camera angles, the reasons for closeups and such detail than months of experience otherwise, according to Lee Tracy, debonair hero of "Clear all Wires," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film of the Broadway stage hit, which is showing from Sunday at the Queen's Theatre.

Locations all over the world, only talked about in the stage play, are

DARWINIAN
THEORY
A "DREAM"LESSON OF THE MICROSCOPE

The Missing Link problem and the theory of man's evolution from the ape stage were criticised in a paper read to the Victoria Institute, London by Dr. Albert Fieschmann, Professor of Zoology and comparative Anatomy in the University of Erlangen (Bavaria).

Darwin, he said, would have abandoned his dream of a single great genealogical tree for all species of animals, if he had lived to see the later advances in animal anatomy.

Darwin's theory had not been confirmed by the discoveries of anatomical research, yet evolutionists still searched for "ancestors" in the graveyards of the past, and arranged fossil fragments—leg bones, teeth of skulls—of various extinct species of horse into hypothetical series.

A MILLION SPECIES.

To-day scientists had classified approximately one million animal species. These could not be held to have developed from one genealogical tree.

The microscope had made possible the detail work of their anatomical research. They had discovered that all animal structures were developed from special layers which recalled the annual rings of trees.

"The microscope disclosed the fact," continued Dr. Fieschmann, "that all the body layers are made up of cells—tiny little building stones from 0.07 to 0.1 mm. in length."

"Many great transformations are seen to take place; a tiny double cell, the fertilized egg, from 0.5 to 0.2 mm. in diameter, grows into an adult creature. The investigation of this marvel is far more profitable than making unverified guesses regarding the genealogical changes of long-extinct animal species of former ages, which are only known to us from bits of their skeletons."

shown in the picture. Elaborate research reproduced a Moscow hotel overlooking the Kremlin, the headquarters of the secret police into whose hands Tracy, as the American news correspondent, eventually falls, and the Red Army.

Tracy plays a fast-talking, energetic and irresponsible newspaperman who steals his employer's chorus girl "sweetie," is fired, tries to "frame" a big story by staging a shooting to get back on the payroll, narrowly escapes killing the Commissioner of Police and is himself hit in Moscow's hero, then is arrested when the police learn of the plot, and in this and other thrilling episodes in other parts of the world goes through comical troubles with women, armies, police and other enemies.

"Second Hand Wife"

The most beautiful legs in Hollywood are displayed in one scene of "Second Hand Wife" coming to the King's on Sunday. More than 500 pairs were inspected by Hamilton MacFadden and his assistants before the final selections were made.

In the film, lower extremities are observed under 30 or more decks in Hongkong, 12th June, 1933.

An office scene during the early part of the picture. The camera sweeps across the half-circle of symmetrical limbs, here and there marred by a comic pair. A careful observer will note, however, that there are no comic legs in the front row.

Sally Eilers and Ralph Bellamy portray the leading roles in the picture which depicts the story of a business man who, neglected by his wife, falls in love with his secretary. How the man and the girl work out their problem forms the basis of what is said to be one of the most dramatic and entertaining stories yet to reach the screen.

"Second Hand Wife" is an adaptation of Kathleen Norris' latest novel and MacFadden not only directed the picture but prepared the story for the screen.

DISCOVERY II IN LONDON

GREETINGS AFTER LONG ABSENCE

FIRST STORY OF ACHIEVEMENTS

London, May 6.
The Royal Research ship Discovery II, berthed in St. Katharine's Dock yesterday at the end of her long voyage in the Antarctic, and was the scene of happy meetings between members of her crew and their relatives and friends.

Later in the day the loss of her Captain, Commander W. M. Garey, was being investigated at the Board of Trade.

The sense of tragedy was never absent from the minds of all who heard unfolded, in the chart-room and the floating laboratories of Discovery II, the expedition's achievements under the lost leader, achievements which will give this voyage first place among all those which the Discovery Committee of the Colonial Office have yet organised for the Falkland Islands.

While the wives and children of the voyagers came aboard toasts were drunk, trunks were eagerly packed, and crowded mail-bags opened, after a year and a half of ocean wandering in the storms and icebergs of the loneliest sea in all the world. And then the triumphs of the voyage were related. These included the following:

SOME RESULTS.

Accurate charting, for the first time, of the South Orkney Islands, one of the loneliest parts of the Empire;

Circumnavigation of Antarctica in the Polar winter, with results of enormous value to hydrography, world meteorology and biology;

Discovery of the sharp world limits of the cold surface water of the Antarctic Ocean, in which alone the great whales can thrive; Invention of a successful method of marking whales, without which their numbers and migrations can never be known.

Final proof of the discovery made during the previous voyage that the Antarctic Continent is linked to South America by a submarine range of Andes, and is not, as science has had to assume, a unique continent, separated by an ocean thousands of fathoms deep.

The last-named discovery has confirmed the belief of the German geologist who first suggested that the Andes did not end at Cape Horn, but reappeared in South Georgia, the South Sandwich Islands, the South Orkneys, and finally Graham Land in a gigantic horse-shoe sweep.

SPECIMENS.

But the principal discoveries of the expedition will take many years to ascertain. The land staff of the Discovery will be working in borrowed premises at the Natural History Museum on the bottled specimens of the fauna

Swearing Abolished in U.S. Navy

"UNDESIRABLE"

The United States Navy is taking a leaf out of the book of the commander of "H.M.S. Pinafore," who "never used a big, big, D."

Admiral R. H. Leigh, Commander-in-Chief of the Fleet, has issued an order directing:

"That all commanding officers take immediate steps to eradicate the undesirable habit of profane language."

Disciplinary action is urged against offenders.

and flora of the Antarctic Ocean, with which the Discovery's hold is filled.

"Every evening, immediately after dinner, the ship was stopped," Mr. Dilwyn John, head of the scientists on board, said, "and we spent the next four hours on deck, throwing bottles and nets into varying depths of the sea, in all weather and temperatures. The knowledge we shall gain at South Kensington from these samples is essential to the great purpose behind all the work of Discovery II, the old Discovery, and the William Scoresby—the preservation of the whale and the whaling industry from extinction."

"LENIN AIR FLEET"

NEW AIRSHIPS

Moscow.
Work on the "Lenin air fleet"— to consist of seven airships—is to start this year and, according to programme, will be completed by 1937.
This is the latest evidence of the faith put by the Soviet Union in lighter-than-air craft.

According to the "Tass" news agency, "the tollies of the U.S.S.R.
have already subscribed the equivalent of £4,000,000 towards the cost of building these large airships for the Lenin fleet."
Russia's first semi-rigid airship will be ready shortly to take the air. Its gas volume will be 2,150 cubic metres and it will have a range of 450 miles at a cruising speed of fifty miles an hour.
A second, slightly larger, semi-rigid airship will be ready in June this year and a third before Christmas.—Reuter.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

The Popularity of the Beret

(From a Paris Correspondent)

Nothing will kill the beret. Milliners are making the best of it. It certainly has more than nine lives and is seen everywhere, and worn at quite a new slant—well on the brow, up at the back, and hiding the hair in front.

Donors have staged a comeback, and they are worn at such an exaggerated tilt that they are kept on apparently only by skillful manipulation and a large element of luck.

There are numerous breeds of sailors in varying materials with crushed crowns and wavy brims, much beloved by the older woman. The "Dolly Varden" chapeau, decked up with spring flowers and made of one of the new straws, is charming and romantic-looking. Some of them are tipped over the nose and have the brims hiked up in the back and banked with flowers. The French hats that mount to the back of the head, and are there adorned with a cache-peigne of beautiful flower, call for special attention. A leghorn model is made with a brim that careers over the nose in front, widens, and is pushed up right in the back. A cache-peigne is placed across the back, and a blue velvet ribbon makes a tour of the crown.

JADE ORNAMENTS

Popularity of This Chinese Stone

(From a Paris Correspondent)

Jade ornaments have been worn by beauties throughout the ages. Though its popularity may wane from time to time, invariably jade springs to the fore again, carved with new designs, symbolic of the art of the period.

Just now in Paris jade is one of the most popular stones. Set in curious styles, it is to be found in every jeweller's window. Looking at these modern presentations of the lovely green stone, it is not easy to remember that jade was worn by Chinese beauties many centuries ago. Many examples of jade are in other shades than the green with which most people are familiar, but it is the green jade which fashionable women are generally wearing.

Other jewellery novelties consist of bracelets designed in handpainted china. So broad are these ornaments, they are like circles cut from old-fashioned china flower

Now For Some Team Work to Cut Down Your Poundage

Touch the floor back of your head with the ball... then up again

BY JAC AUER

When it comes to persistent reducing, nothing excels the use of a medicine ball.

Get somebody to do a little workout with you each day for awhile. You'll both profit by the strenuous regime it puts you through.

Sit on the floor, leaning back slightly, feet apart. The object of this medicine ball exercise is to receive the ball when rolled to you, in a slightly reclining position, to swing the ball over your head as you receive it, touch the floor with it, swing up again still holding it and toss it to your little helper.

You have no idea how invigorating this exercise is. It stirs sluggish circulation, catches the imagination, introduces a bit of team work that gives zest to any exercise and in addition actually works out all of your trunk and arm muscles and calls on your leg muscles because you must keep your heels to the floor, to have the exercise perfect.

Take it easy. Have your co-exerciser roll the ball easily to you. Lift it over your head easily, raise your arms quietly, stretching them to their utmost, fall back easily. Have a small pillow ready to brace your shoulders, if you feel the need of it.

The big pull comes, of course, on the uptake. Getting the ball back over your head and throwing it to your helper is what gives the exercise. Do it for five minutes. You'll find your blood and muscles singing a spring song.

FRENCH HATS

The Newest Styles From Paris

Some stitched black satin hats are worn very high at the back of the head and dented well down in front.

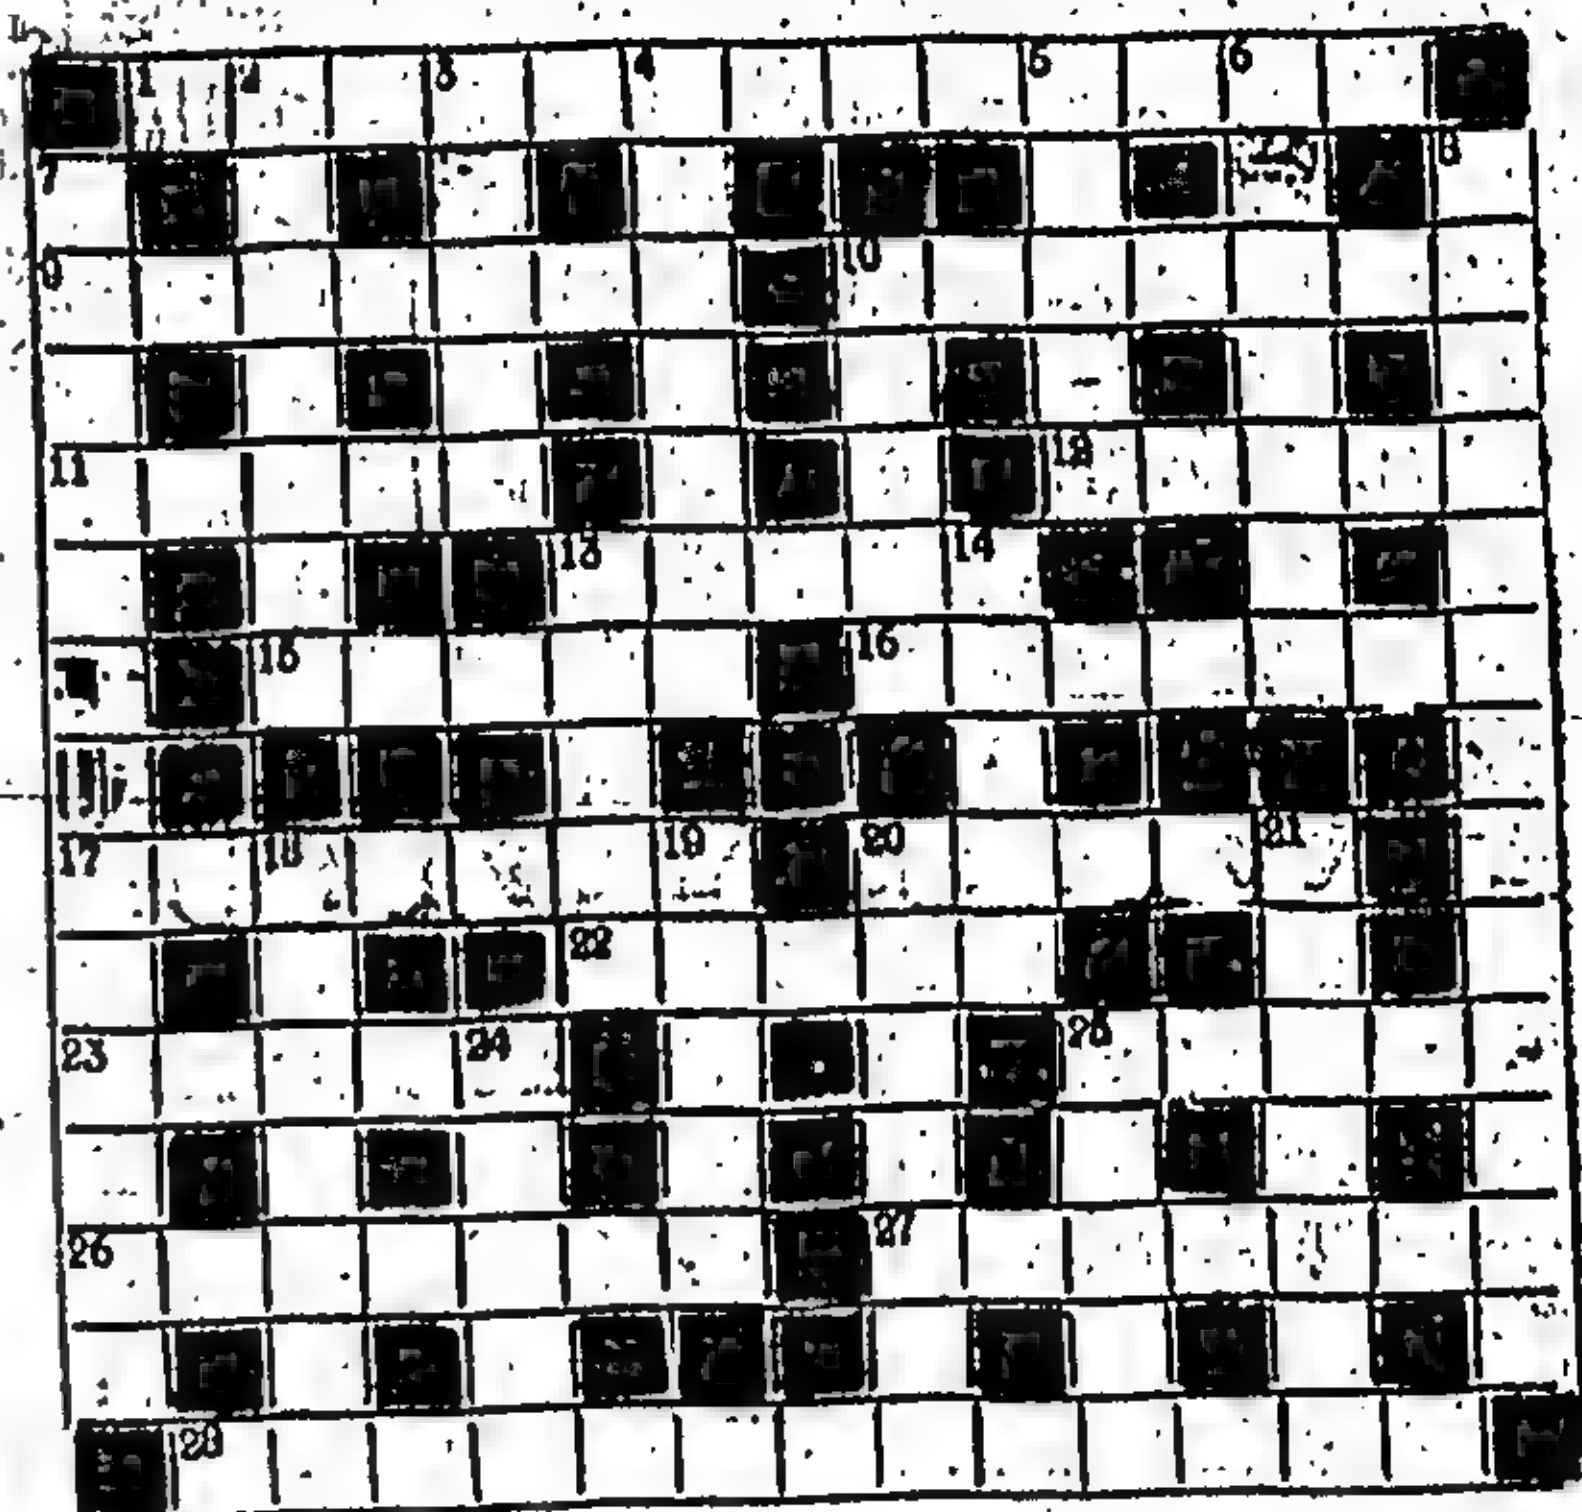

Cock and ostrich feathers trim hats, and some of these have important looking crowns and are no longer flat and small. The "cape-lines"—i.e., the grim hats that most of the Paris milliners are featuring—are in for a summer visit. The brims are so original, they are full of kinks and crochets, however large they be, and although the limit seems to be the cart-wheel, they never hide the face. They are always cleverly tilted up, so as to form an arbour, as it were, beneath which the face glows with mysterious attraction.

or they have a dashing cavalier slant, with one side rolled or tilted up, and the other descending to form a background for a clear-cut profile. Crowns are generally a wee bit higher; they are shallow, with a faint tendency towards squareness.

Sometimes the newest hats have the dear little dish crowns of 1860. The thing is that low crowns are feminine, and, above all, youthful. High crowns certainly age a woman; they add a year (to be polite) with every inch.

Welsh hats are going to be worn by Parisiennes, those of them who like the idea of a high-crowned hat. Several models are shown in shiny plect straw, and they are obviously inspired by the national hat of the Welshwoman. Trimmings at the side with bows of ribbon or a tuft of feathers, they certainly look immensely smart, and sometimes a nose veil is added to soften.

WANG'S DEFENCE.

U.S. LOAN NOT FOR CIVIL WAR

Nanking, June 14.

In the course of a lengthy statement on the $50,000,000 loan for the purchase of American wheat and cotton, Mr. Wang Ching-wei today refutes all apprehension that the money might be used towards civil strife, saying the Government has made every effort to maintain peace since September 18, 1931.

In the next place he says the procedure followed in securing the loan was not incorrect and asserts that Mr. T. V. Soong, after signing the agreement, referred it to the Government which had it confirmed by the Central Political Council, and also referred it to the Legislative Yuan for approval.

He explains that "certain reasons" prevented Mr. Soong submitting it to the Government before signing it and says no one need fear that the Government will misuse the loan, as it will endeavour to make all its transactions public, utilising the money with the utmost care to the best advantage.—Reuter.

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONICA O'DARE, beautiful, poor and 20, is in love with DAN CARDIGAN who belongs to one of Belvedere's rich families. Monnie works to help support her mother, her younger sister, KAY, and brother, MARK. When BILL, an older brother, is arrested at the garage where he works Monnie goes to his aid. She gets in touch with GERALDINE KURFACE, handsome newcomer to town who she is sure will help her. Bill, chivalrously wishing to keep out of her trouble the name of the girl he was with when the robbery was planned, refuses to talk. The girl, ANGIE GILLEN, rushes to him and helps to clear his name. Monnie learns Angie is about to be divorced and will then marry Bill.

CHAPTER VII

Monnie was writing down a prescription number for old Mrs. Beards when she heard his voice. Her heart began to hammer against her ribs and she felt the warm colour surging into her cheeks. Angrily she took herself in hand. When she turned around, after serving her customer, she was quite composed.

"Hello, Dan!"

"Lo, Monnie."

He was in one of his best moods to-day, she could see that. He looked splendid in his riding clothes, sure to make the loafers on High street nudge each other and stare. Gabardine breeches, sleeveless tan sweater, carelessly knotted brown tie with a gold pin in the shape of a crop.

"Haven't seen you in ages," he told her lightly.

Monnie said, "No, Dan."

"I've been out of town," Dan went on with importance. "Dad had some business in Chicago I had to tend to." He lowered his voice and it took on the caressing note Monnie knew. "Missed you, sugar," he said.

It wasn't much, but from Dan this meant a lot. She tried not to be elated but she was. Dan had missed her—he was telling her so. Why, it made everything different, made the shop, the street, the whole town, come suddenly alive.

She straightened a case of powder boxes with capable fingers and smiled at him. "Nice of you to say that, Dunny. I've been frightfully busy."

Just so he wouldn't think she'd been sitting at home waiting for him, that was. Well, it was true too. She had been busy.

He ordered some cigarettes and paid for them. Somehow during the transaction he managed to get possession of one slim hand.

"Monnie, honestly, didn't you even know I'd been away?"

She glanced around nervously, glad there was no one in the store except Mr. Vernon himself, busy at the soda fountain.

"I've been rushed, Dan. Didn't you?"—her voice grew serious—"didn't you hear about that difficulty of Bill's?"

There, it was out. She had brazenly dragged it into the open, giving Dan no opportunity to ignore it. He frowned and muttered uneasily, "I did hear some gab about it 'round town last night."

"Bill is back at work," Monnie said coolly. "Mr. Harnett was glad to have him. It all blew over."

"Well, that's fine," Dan said heartily. "I'm mighty glad." He was still prying her fingers determinedly in his. "Monnie, I just wanted to tell you—"

His voice was low and confidential and in spite of all her pride and resentment her traitorous heart responded to it. But she was not to know, that day at any rate, what Dan wanted to say to her because at that moment an imperious young person in the coolest and freshest of summer whites bore down upon them.

"Dan, don't you know Mother's waiting? You said you'd be only a moment." His sister, Geraldine, Geraldine's bright eyes flicked Monnie's face for a moment. She was cool, distant, self-possessed.

"Oh, how d'ye do,"

Monnie acknowledged the salute with a slight bow. You never would have suspected that before the days of the O'Dares changed fortunes these two had linked arms together at juvenile dancing classes.

Geraldine chose to ignore Monica O'Dare nowadays because Monnie clerked in a drug store and had only one new dress a year.

"Sandra will be waiting," Dan's sister continued. "She said to be there at one and you're not even dressed."

Dan relapsed into his old defensively sullen air and followed her out of the store. Not before he had said, very low, "I'll be seeing you soon, Monnie."

She raged in her heart. So that was the way of it! He hadn't the courage to face his family with the fact that he loved her. He expected her to be content with scraps of comfort, with whispered words now and then. Well, he was mistaken! There was a pain in her chest just the same, a stricken sense of having been cheated. Sandra would see him at lunch. They would laugh and chat about nothing at all. And Sandra didn't care in the least about him—or did she?

This was a thought Monnie had been pushing into the back of her mind for weeks now. Oh, it was folly—it was utter madness! Sandra knew men in every quarter of the globe. Why should she fix her attentions on Dan Cardigan? Just because she, Monnie, thought him the handsomest, most devastating male in the United States was no reason every other woman should regard him in the same way.

Several customers came in after that and she had to hurry, smile and be agreeable. It helped, she thought, to be what people knew as "a poor working girl." You couldn't sit around with your mind on your troubles. And she was, really, the mainstay of the family. She got $18 a week. That, with the tiny income left by her father and with what Bill contributed, kept them going. If only—she thought for the thousandth time—if only Mark were older. It would be five years at least until he could fend for himself. And Kay, so pretty, so alluring—Monnie would have to see that things went right for Kay.

Sometimes she felt like an animal in a cage—trapped—desperate. She could not get out! She would have to stay just where she was, to be tormented and snubbed.

She would not be free until Mark and Kay were able to look after themselves. By that time, thought Monnie drearily, she would be old. Old at 25!

Oh, if only (she thought, wildly and frantically) she could get away to New York—be in a chorus, do clothes-modelling—anything! She could see herself, suave and sophisticated, wearing the most beautiful clothes, going to the theatre, being popular and mysterious. She and her mother could have an apartment. Presently some splendid man—a captain of industry, for choice—would come along. He would be older—38 or 40—he would have his faith in womankind restored by her. They would have a quiet wedding and go abroad on a honeymoon.

"Wake up, Monnie!" It was Mr. Vernon's good-natured voice.

"Daydreamin'?"

She flushed and stammered.

"Guess I was."

"Well, Mrs. Burke wants an ounce of senna leaves."

He shuffled away, his spectacles pushed high on his forehead. He was a kindly, middle-aged man, Mr. Vernon. Belvedere referred to him as "an old back."

Monnie had no idea of his age, but roughly put it at 60. He was unfailingly kind to her and in return she gave him the best service she knew how to give.

She had never known how to thank him for letting her have this job.

She filled Mrs. Burke's order, observing that Donny, the boy who attended to the soda counter, had his hands full. The high school boys and girls often came as far as Vernon's for their ham sandwiches and chocolate malted milks.

No need to look for Kay. Kay "took" her lunch, hating it, longing to join the gay ranks, thronging to the "hot dog" wagon across the way.

But it would have been too severe a drain on the family purse to let Kay buy her lunch every day.

Monnie sighed again at the recollection of this one, last restriction the O'Dares were subject to. Oh, it was difficult to be poor, and no mistake about it!

Presently she was free to leave for her own mid-day meal. She washed her hands at the little basin hidden by a screen in the back room. Mr. Vernon had already snatched a bite at the counter, during the lull. She glanced at herself in the cracked mirror over the bowl. She looked, she thought, pale and dragged. No wonder Dan preferred Sandra's company to hers. Sandra was always gay and witty and well dressed, rosy with sun-tan gained on the links and the tennis court.

A sort of spiritual nausea swept over Monnie with this wave of self-pity. "I hate all this," she cried rebelliously in her soul. "I must find a way out."

All the way home the thought persisted. People said often that if you wanted a thing—long enough and hard enough—you got it. Well, she would try wanting. She made a wish, like the heroine of half a hundred fairy tales, for happiness.

"I don't care how I get it or when," she murmured. "But I want to be happy before I'm old."

By happiness she meant, in the way of the young, pretty frocks, someone to admire her, excitement. Most of all she desired freedom from this love bondage which had been like an illness since she first laid eyes on Dan Cardigan.

But try as she might she could not banish anger from her heart—anger and a sense of betrayal for Sandra Lawrence. Sandra pretended to be her friend. Sandra knew how she felt about Dan and yet seemed to be doing all she could to undermine Monnie with him.

"She says she doesn't care a thing about him," Monnie reminded herself. "I wonder!"

"It's pretty hot. I guess that's it."

The shrilling of the telephone interrupted her.

"I'll take that, Monnie. You finish your lunch."

She was back in an instant, her pale face a trifle flushed. "Monnie, someone for you. It's Mr.—it's Dan Cardigan."

CHINESE YOUTH CAUGHT BY INDIAN SOLDIERS

Two Indian soldiers from the Mule Corps appeared before Mr. Butters as complainants at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning when a youth Wan Chan-yau was charged with stealing a sack containing meat and vegetables.

Detective Sergeant McKay stated that the bag was left on the Government Pier at Tsimshatsui shortly after noon yesterday, the complainants at the time being engaged in transporting rations of food from Kowloon to Hongkong. It was alleged that defendant tried to pick up the sack but was caught by one of the complainants.

Defendant denied any attempt to steal stating that he only kicked the sack.

Sentence of one month's hard labour was passed.

UNMANIFESTED CARGO

IGNORANCE OF THE LAW PLEA

A fine of $100 or two months was imposed on Cheung Sui-sun by Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning for having unmanifested cargo on board the B. and S. steamer Tai-yuan without the permission of the master or the owners of the vessel.

Detective Sergeant McKay said the cargo, consisting of singlets, hats, socks and belts, was found in a basket in the second class saloon, while the singlets were covered with pieces of old clothing. All were taxable.

Pleading ignorance of the law, defendant said a friend asked him to take the articles from Hongkong to Amoy.

PRINTER'S CLAIM

PREPARATION OF DIRECTORIES

A claim by Pui Ying, printer, of French Street, for $300 against the International Advertising Service, of Asia Life Building, was adjourned by the Puisne Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindell, at the Supreme Court this morning.

The claim arose from the alleged sale and delivery to the defendants of a number of directories which had originally been prepared for a Chinese who was eventually unable to pay cash for them, and who was a witness to the arrangement made between the parties in the action.

Mr. C. Y. Kwan represented plaintiff and Mr. M. A. da Silva, of D'Almada Remedios and Silva, appeared for defendants.

LOTTERY CASE TO BE RE-HEARD

SOLICITOR'S NEW ARGUMENTS

Before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning, Mr. W. A. Mackinlay made an application for rehearing in the case in which an elderly Chinese was fined $1,200 or six months on charges of keeping a gaming house for po po lottery at 34, Circular Pathway, and possession of 4,990 tickets.

Mr. Mackinlay said his instructions were that the defendant was the principal tenant of the three cubicles. He had some fresh arguments which he wished to put forward.

Hearing was fixed for Monday afternoon.

Detective-Sergeant Moran, said defendant was in goal.

STREET SOCCER STOPPED

POLICE SEIZE 200 FOOTBALLS

An "epidemic" of street football has seized Soho. In every street and square, youths and boys have been playing "el futbol" with tremendous energy—sometimes to the annoyance of more elderly passers-by.

So word was given to the policemen: "Street football must stop." In 24 hours the police seized 7 regulation soccer balls, and 200 rubber balls, which were being used for football.

The confiscated balls are to be sent to children's homes.—Reuter.

YESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY.

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Business done: $550,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—After an all-day decline due to a firmer dollar the market rallied in the last hour due to sinking dollar and also prospects of a balanced budget and early Congress adjournment. Universal leaf tobacco declared an extra dividend of one dollar on the common stock in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of fifty cents. "Ironage" Magazine reports: Steel production at forty-seven per cent. of capacity, the highest since May 12, 1931, with blast furnace operations forshadowing still further expansion. Moderate price increases are regarded as inevitable.

THE CANTON SEPARATIST MOVEMENT.

The shiftings of Chinese politics have not been so subtle in the past eighteen months: that the growing cleavage between Nanking and Canton has passed unnoticed. Largely upon Canton's initiative, the breach has been rapidly widening and a complete rupture now appears imminent. The leaders of the South-West Political Council, which is really a government independent of Nanking in every important respect, barely paying lip service to the central authorities, has seized upon the conclusion of the truce agreement to challenge Chiang Kai-shek openly before the world at large. Chiang Kai-shek has responded in the customary way, attempting to buy off hostility with an offer of an additional $300,000 monthly for military expenses. He is also sending down General Wang Shao-hung, the Minister of the Interior, whose long associations with Kwangsi make him persona grata in Canton, in an effort to come to an understanding. How far Wang Shao-hung, or the $300,000, will succeed, depends largely upon what General Wang has to offer. In the present mood of the Canton leaders, it is fairly certain that they will demand Nanking recognition of the autonomy of the South-West Provinces definitely allied with Kwangsi who are cooperating in the establishment of Cantonese control. Meanwhile, Chiang Kai-shek, it is important to note, has been rapidly consolidating his position in North China. When Chang Hsueh-liang handed over his armies to the Generalissimo, he made a strong northern government ruled from Nanking a practical possibility for the first time, and the signs are that Chiang is now prepared to accept an independent Canton as an accomplished fact. The Cantonese played a large part in the creation of the government at Nanking in 1927 and have attempted to dominate Nanking ever since, generally to the detriment of the central author-ties. The attempt has been resisted, with varying success. With the Peking area also largely independent of Nanking, the policy of the government had necessarily to be unification with the co-operation of Canton. That vital factor in the situation having been removed, co-operation ceases to be of great importance, always provided an understanding can be achieved by which the northern and southern governments will work in their own spheres without attempting to usurp the authority of the other in the territory accepted as under its control. If we could be sure of the motives governing the recent actions of the South-West group, we should be prepared to agree that the separatist tendency could, finally, only have a good effect. Provided friction ceases with recognition of Canton's autonomy, provided the Cantonese are content to continue the development of their own territory, as they have done for the last two years, if the Nanking faction confines itself to the considerable task of unifying North China, real progress becomes more likely. The waste of civil conflict will be avoided, and in the apparent division there may be a greater hope for the ultimate real unification of the country. A great responsibility lies upon General Chan Chai-tong and the Canton leaders. They are well organised, are doing excellent work in the South-west and represent probably, considering the area controlled, the most efficient government in the country. If continuing their good work, securing the best out of their territory, is satisfactory to their ambitions, the independence movement should cause no alarm. And if Chiang Kai-shek, noted for his realism, can recognise and accept the realities of this situation, he should be only too willing to share the responsibilities of controlling this continent of a country populated by a quarter of the people of the globe.

England Looks to Holland

No analysis of the slum problem can be finally satisfactory that does not recognize that the question is individual and moral, as well as economic. If slums make slum dwellers, slum dwellers also make slums. Many municipalities in Britain have found that when the physical slums have been pulled down and their inhabitants housed in better places, only the fringe of the problem has been touched. Habits formed through years of living in undesirable surroundings are not easily lost. It is being suggested in Britain that countries with slum problems might find much to imitate in certain experiments that have been carried out with considerable success in recent years in Holland. In Amsterdam and The Hague the inhabitants of slums marked out for destruction are not moved immediately into normal houses. They are given a period of training in intermediate dwelling places under the supervision of people specially educated for this purpose. At The Hague there is a centre of 106 houses of two storeys on the outskirts of the city; at Amsterdam there are two centres, one of 66 and the other of 139 houses. These houses have a clubroom for social purposes, where religious services are held and instruction is given in handicrafts and needlework. If Britain should adopt some form of the Dutch idea, it will be an interesting case of reciprocity, for the supervisors who are so important a part of the Dutch scheme are all trained in the fundamentals established by the English social reformer, Octavia Hill.

WORLD CRISIS

VI: ARE WE TO WAIT FOR THE HALF-BAKED ARMCHAIR IDEALISM

BY FREDERICK COPE, A.M.I.E.E.

(This is the concluding article of Mr. Cope's interesting series on the world's economic and monetary problems to-day.)

The object of these Articles, has not really been to suggest a scheme, but simply to attempt to open up the subject to the average man who, so far, seems to have given little thought to the matter.

It will be interesting to observe the progress of the present World Economic Conference. Can a scheme be devised whereby constant world prosperity can be procured, and at the same time, the principles of our financial system, as we know them to-day, be retained?

Speaking with reference to this, such an authority as Mr. Montague Norman, the Governor of the Bank of England, recently said that "the difficulties are so vast and so unlimited, that I approach the subject, not only in ignorance, but in humility."

An endeavour to solve a problem and retain a basic error is an impossible job, and will always have to be approached in this manner.

President Roosevelt might persuade the nations definitely to accept Bimetallism, or numerous other developments of that nature may occur. But even with such alterations of the present system, we are still among the leaves and twigs of the question.

CARDINAL ERROR.

They may have an insignificant influence in diminishing the effect of the error, but a complete solution is what is desired, and so long as an erroneous factor is retained, there will be no solution to the Equation.

Pitch out the error contained in the Money System, what I have called the third property of money, and out goes with it the myriad of puzzling complications and the eternal arguments. Let us finally solve the physical wealth aspect of existence and get nearer to other jobs of which the World has plenty waiting for us.

Destruction of Wealth cannot be right.

Suppression of Productive Capacity cannot be right.

Repression of Man's natural and supreme desire to expand, and progress, cannot be right.

Any scheme which countenances these wrongs, must ultimately be doomed to failure.

Some useful scheme might be evolved by the right type of delegate, and it is hoped that the Conference consists of men who will prove themselves to know more about things that can, and must, be done, than about things which cannot be done. Drastic changes cannot be completely argued out.

BRITAIN AND GOLD.

Before Britain went off the Gold Standard, there were thousands of academic reasons why she should avert the catastrophe at all costs.

Evil consequences of unknown density lay ahead. Tens of millions of Gold Reserves were sacrificed in order to avert the fearful step. Finally decision was taken for her. She had no option. She was pushed off. But what was the result? Were all the fears realised? On the contrary, any unfavourable consequences were more than outweighed. A substantial gain in fact has been realised, and not a loss as was anticipated. Britain has now no inclination to return to the position she fought so dearly to retain.

There are those who believe that a similar happy result would emerge by some sensible, but drastic, alteration to our present economic system.

In these times we cannot afford to refer cynically to Idealism. Thought and its physical expressions are advancing so quickly that the Idealism of yesterday is becoming the Realism of to-day.

The Prince of Wales, in a recent speech, made reference to the fact that our wealth to-day exceeds in abundance the extravagant visions of the Dreamers of only a few years ago.

Man has unlimited purchasing power in terms of goods and services. If gold is demanded, just as in the case of War debtors, his capacity to pay is limited.

ERRONEOUS THOUGHT.

We have been accustomed to think, erroneously, of wealth in terms of money, whereas wealth consists of goods and services. The greatest difficulty which confronts us is to sacrifice and change this standard of wealth, which has been with us all our lives. We have known no other. To change a mental standard which is inherited and inbred, is one of life's hardest tasks. In this case, however much we may dislike it and desire otherwise, "the writing is on the Wall."

We are faced with that task. The quicker we can change the erroneous thought, the sooner we shall divest ourselves of its consequent penalties—our present troubles. The question is "Can we do it!"

Open the sluice gates of present finance and let Wealth flow. Society need be little altered, except by a general increase all round in physical wealth. Let us rid Society of the unpleasant feeling of uncertainty. Let us make daily work for the world a thing of pleasure, not of anxiety. Under existing conditions, business ability, hard work, honest endeavour and productivity—the things that matter—are all at a discount.

Rewards are on the knees of the money manipulators, the deflators and the inflators of Credit and values.

The business man the World over has no effectual control over his business. If he manages to escape the direct consequences of manipulators, he is in daily danger of being caught by the indirect.

Let us rid the employed man from the fear of the "axe," reductions in salary, and the insane cry of economy.

Let us immediately remove industry and commerce from the sphere of gambling. Can any man, however he may twist his logic, honestly explain to himself why the price of a share in a 100% plant is $20 (Continued on Next Columns.)

The Very Idea!

By Eddie Kelly, Writer.

ABOUT once every three or four months, we manage, by dint of herculean effort, going without a shave, and working day and night, to get ahead of the work that is piled on us.

On such occasions we sit back in our swivel chair, light a fire on the end of a cigar, relax, and tell the boy to bring in the baskets of correspondence from our public.

Scented and perfumed letters are laid aside, to be read at leisure, accounts are thrown back into the basket, and other correspondence is passed on to our secretary.

As this is the middle of the month, we haven't got enough money for stamps to reply to those correspondents who need our fatherly advice, so we're going to print them in this column.

Here are a few sample letters; typical of those received (and grappled with) by us:

Dear Mr. Kelly.—My hand trembles, and I can scarce forbear gnawing the end of my penholder, as I set down the hideous enigma which leers me in the face to-day, blighting my career, corroding my very soul, dragging my young life down and down, through the cankering quagmires of calamity to the uttermost maw of abysmal ruin itself.

Twenty-four hours ago I was a happy, carefree boy, light-heartedly romping through the halls of the grand old Central British School, which I attend to-day, I am an empty husk of a man, one who has gazed on the hollowness of life and who finds it in his broken heart to fling a merciless and bitter, "Ha, ha!" at the taunting miseries of the universe.

Mr. Kelly, I am approaching man's estate. I have known what it is to shave. I shall be 15 years of age in a few short weeks. Yet the beings, who call themselves my parents have refused to let me wear trousers. They force me to face the world in short pants. Despoiled and outcast, I sink along life's thoroughfare clad in my humiliation, doomed to the contempt of my fellows, and the insulting familiarity of my juniors.

Shall I go on with my life, Mr. Kelly, or shall I put an end to it? —"AN ACHING SOUL."

Dear "Aching Soul"—We would strongly advise you to go around clad in something else besides humiliation, or you may be misunderstood. Why not compromise by wearing garters. Despite the objection on the part of the Bishop, there is no gaining their sex appeal.—EDWARD KELLY.

Dear Edward Kelly.—On a point of etiquette, should I accept the offer of my brother's talpan to teach me how to play the yo-yo?—ROSIE GOLD-DIGGER.

Dear Rosie.—Yo-yoing is simply not done with talpans. Why not get him to teach you how to play "Ring, a Ring, for Rosie."—EDWARD KELLY.

Dear Eddie.—I am crazy about two young men, one in the shipping business and the other a bank clerk, but two other boys, one living on the Peak and the other at Kowloon enjoy my company. I see another man, who is third officer on a Dollar boat, every time the ship is in port, and I would like your help to tell me which gentleman friend I should have.—ANGELINA.

Dear Angelina.—Take our advice and leave them all alone. Take to gin instead.

Dear Mr. Kelly.—Are you really and truly married, or do you say so in your column just for a joke.—CURIOUS.

Dear Curious.—Ask the wife.—EDWARD KELLY.

to-day, rises to $120, and drops down to $8 a short time after. If gamble we must, and if we have not sufficient methods already, let us invent some more, but do not let one man gamble on another man's legitimate daily bread and existence.

Even the super-financier will benefit under a new system. The very system they champion, like some vicious brute, has savagely turned on them. Some of the most important world financiers are to-day experiencing the agonizing ordeal of being under suspicion and are facing Enquiry after Enquiry.

THE ALTERNATIVE.

Alternatively, are we to delay too long in putting our house in order? Are we to wait until the patience of the world is exhausted, when in desperation it will accept an experiment, based on some half-baked armchair idealism, where we shall all probably move by numbers and have the freakish moral standards of a few air-brained cranks and lop-sided fanatics pushed down our throats. Even the Shirt Organisations under a condition of a waning economic life cannot be expected to stave it off indefinitely.

WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE.

CROSS-PURPOSES
REVEALEDFRANCE AND AMERICA AT LOGGERHEADSFIGHT FOR FINANCIAL LEADERSHIP

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, June 15, 9.11 a.m.)

LONDON, JUNE 15.

BEHIND THE SCENES OF THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE A FIERCE CONFLICT IS BEING CARRIED ON BETWEEN FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES, REUTER'S DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT LEARNS.

The dispute is over the chairmanship of the Monetary Commission, the differences which arose yesterday still remaining unsolved.

It is now learned that both desire the chairmanship for themselves, France advancing the contention that the conferment of the chairmanship upon the United States would entail a danger of a lead being given to an inflationist policy.

Unless a settlement can be reached in discussion, presumably the question will have to be put to the vote, although both parties are desirous of avoiding such a step.

DEBT SOLUTION CLEARS THE AIR

Mr. Cordell Hull's speech awakened considerable interest as report has it that the contents were modified just before its delivery on instructions from Washington.

Particular attention was paid to the fact that it followed very closely the programme outlined in Mr. Neville Chamberlain's speech and the delegates are seeing in the situation a united Anglo-American front, the result of the temporary disposal of the war debt question.

SOME DISAPPOINTMENT.

At the same time, the speech of the American delegate caused some disappointment. He was expected to be spectacular, to produce proposals for drastic measures to find a way out of the economic chaos, but he contented himself with generalities and the advocacy of adherence to the tariff truce.

Mr. Hull also insisted that world currencies must, as far as possible, be stabilised and he hinted at an international currency standard along the lines suggested before the Conference opened, namely, an entirely new international standard, of any weight of gold which the Conference chose to confer upon it.

FICTITIOUS UNIT.

It would be a fictitious unit in actuality, something on the lines of the Gold Unit system adopted by the Chinese Maritime Customs.

In view of the rumours of likely advocacy of bimetalism by the United States delegate, it is interesting to note his declaration that the functions of gold and silver should be regulated within the framework of the proposed international currency standard.

LITVINOFF AND BRITISH BOYCOTT.

London, June 14. In the closing stages of to-day's plenary session of the Conference, M. Litvinoff said the Soviet would propose a resolution to supplement the economic truce by an undertaking for the simultaneous suspension in all countries of all legislative or administrative measures of economic warfare.

M. Litvinoff was clearly referring to the British boycott of Russian goods.

He hinted that Russia would shortly be placing large orders abroad, provided long-term credit could be obtained.

DEBT SETTLEMENT.

Dr. Eduard Benes, the leader of the Czechoslovakian delegation, speaking on behalf of the Little Entente Powers, said they regarded the settlement of intergovernmental debts as a matter of the foremost consideration. He was also in favour of the earliest possible restoration of the gold standard.

Dr. Colijn (Holland) doubted whether the return to the gold standard was an ideal which was possible. He strongly urged steps to prevent wide fluctuations of currencies, but, he added, the stabilisation of currencies would be doomed to failure if it was not accompanied by the free circulation of goods.

He joined Mr. Neville Chamberlain in advocating the abolition of shipping subsidies.

POLICYMR. CHAMBERLAIN'S SURVEY.

The British Government's considered policy towards the whole range of the problems before the conference was stated by the Chancellor of Exchequer, whose speech is to be issued as a Government Paper.

Dealing with the present lack of equilibrium between commodity prices and costs, he said: "In the view of the British delegation, the solution must be found by means of a recovery in prices."

Action in various spheres would be necessary. The fundamental monetary condition of a recovery of prices is that credit should be made available by a policy of cheap money and that such credit should be actively employed. This, together with the revival of business confidence, must form an indispensable background of trade recovery.

BANK ACTION.

Central banks should, therefore, undertake to co-operate with a view to securing the monetary conditions required for a rise in prices.

In order that their action may have the desired effect, the policy of cheap money should be clearly announced and vigorously pursued.

Experience in recent months has shown that cheap money, in itself, may not be enough to achieve the desired end rapidly unless means are taken to ensure that the credit made available is actively employed. The question of whether governments can actively assist in this matter by schemes of governmental capital expenditure will also require consideration. The United Kingdom delegation will be very ready to examine, with other delegations, how far employment can be stimulated by such action.

EXCHANGE STABILITY.

Referring to the great importance to international trade of the stability of exchange rates, he said that that must necessarily be attempted in two stages. The immediate objective should be to secure approximate stability between the currencies of the principal countries of the world which would be achieved in no far as the principal countries

IMPORTANCE OF
DUE TO VEHICULAR FERRY

"Jubilee Street has become a very important thoroughfare owing to the vehicular ferry" stated Mr. Wynne-Jones in Court this morning, while dealing with the weekly batch of obstruction summonses brought against Chinese shopkeepers. The magistrate remarked they were trying to alleviate the obstruction and in this connexion he had given fair warning by raising the fine slowly. Police were also trying to clear the thoroughfare of hawkers.

Mr. F. H. Losby and Mr. Horace Lo appeared on behalf of ten and three shopkeepers, respectively.

Sergeant Guild said the goods projected in some cases three inches, in others two, and in one or two instances six inches.

Mr. Losby—I understand you obtained your evidence by riding along on a motor cycle.

Sergeant Guild—Oh no, I stopped (laughter).

Hearing was fixed for Thursday next at 2.30 p.m.

used their resources to counteract fluctuations in the value of their currency caused by temporary movements of capital rather than by fundamental economic factors. The first stage should be dealt with immediately.

GOLD STANDARD.

As regards the second stage, the United Kingdom delegation endorse the view that the ultimate aim of monetary policy should be the restoration of a satisfactory international standard and there is no doubt that the gold standard seems to be generally acceptable.

The time when exchanges are at parity and at which a return to gold could safely be made, must fall to be determined by the proper authorities in each country separately.

After stating the conditions under which the United Kingdom would feel justified in returning to the gold standard he dealt with the abolition of exchange restrictions and expressed the hope that the conference would take positive action to overcome the exchange difficulties which have given rise to those restrictions.

PRICE LEVEL INFLUENCE.

Rises in the wholesale prices of foodstuffs and raw materials and an increase of world trade would contribute powerfully to reduce these difficulties and would assist in bringing to an end both the standstill arrangements in respect of short term debt and the transfer difficulties as regards external indebtedness as a whole.

These exchange and transfer difficulties would also be greatly diminished by a resumption of normal international lending.

Indeed a revival of world trade depended largely upon the renewal of the international flow of capital and every effort should be made to restore the stability and confidence required to render this possible.

TARIFF WALLS.

Referring to the growing obstacles to international trade, he expressed willingness to examine the proposal for attaining a reduction of excessive tariffs by multilateral action.

Any such proposal must be effective in securing really tangible reductions of excessive tariffs, must commend a sufficiently general measure of support and cover a wide enough area not to impose upon the low tariff countries disproportionate sacrifices and must not have injurious repercussions or lead to tariff wars or other economic hostilities.

BILATERAL PACTS.

In the United Kingdom's view, the reduction of customs tariffs can best be achieved by a series of bilateral agreements, which the conference should do all in its power to promote. These agreements should be valid for at least some years to come. With this aim in view commercial treaties, should not be terminated before the tariff negotiations are undertaken and then only after every effort has been made to reach agreements by negotiation.

Proceeding, he said the United Kingdom delegation are strongly in favour of the progressive abolition of all arbitrarily imposed quotas.

QUOTA SYSTEMS.

In view of the disastrous slump in prices, the British Government are themselves engaged in promoting the regulation of the supplies of several food products. They would be prepared to co-operate in the regulation of wheat supplies and the supplies of other foodstuffs on the part of the principal food exporting countries with a view to restoring and maintaining a reasonable level of prices.—British Wireless.

THOUGHT BANISHMENT
SAME AS GAOLCalculated He Had Two Months' Remission

Charged before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with returning from banishment before the expiration of his term, a man named Wong Ying said he was under the impression that his time was up.

Sergeant Basting, who prosecuted, said defendant was banished in 1929 for five years and was still 10 months short of his term.

His Worship (to defendant).—How did you calculate that your period of banishment was over?

Defendant.—Well, I thought 10 months represented a year in banishment as in gaol.

Sentence of six months, was passed.

BANISHEES RETURN
YOUTH WHO FLED FROM FIGHTING

A Chinese youth, aged 15, who was banished from the Colony only for ten years, twelve days ago, was sentenced to six months' hard labour by Mr. Wynne-Jones in Court this morning for a breach of the deportation order.

Defendant said he came back because there was fighting in the country. He pleaded he had no fare for Canton. Inspector Vincent pointed out that the Government had paid his fare to Canton when he was deported.

Another man was also sent to prison for six months for returning from banishment. He was sent away in 1926 for ten years.

AMAZING SPEY ROYAL VICTORY

43 SHOTS
TO 6

C.C.C. OVERWHELM
YACHT CLUB

POLICE SUCCESSES IN CHAMPIONSHIP

LATEST FIXTURES

Some astonishing bowls was seen on the Police Green yesterday, when the Craighower rink beat the Yacht Club in the Spey Royal Cup by 43 shots to six.

This is probably the severest defeat ever inflicted on a team in this competition and the achievement was due entirely to the remarkable team work of the winners.

Composed of G. L. Buchanan (No. 1), B. W. Bradbury (No. 2), H. Beer (No. 3) and U. M. Omar (skip), the "Craig" rink maintained such consistent accuracy that 4's and 3's were regularly registered.

The 16th head was tragic for the Yacht Club viewpoint when Craighower scored a seven, but throughout there was only one rink in it as was shown by the way Craighower recorded 4's at the 3rd, 11th, 12th, 18th and 21st heads.

Skipped by A. Macfarlane, the Yacht Club four strove hard to recover lost ground, but intermittent singles and a two on the 17th head were their only rewards. They lay shot wood on the 5th, 7th, 9th and 10th heads.

The result:
Craighower Yacht Club
G.L. Buchanan J.L. Spence
B.W. Bradbury J.A.R. Selby
H. Beer J.W.C. Bonnar
U.M. Omar A. Macfarlane (skip) (skip)

ELECTRIC'S SMART WIN.

The Hongkong Electric held a surprise in store for Taikeo yesterday when they eliminated the Recreation Club by 23 shots to 12.

The rinks were:
H.K. Electric Taikeo R.C.
J. Sloan D. Peoples
J. de Lunny J. Watson
L. de Rome J. Chalmers
W.H.B. Muskett W. Wotherpoon (skip) 23 (skip) 12

THE CHAMPIONSHIP

POLICE PLAYERS WIN

R. F. Luz, 1929 champion and two Police representatives figured among yesterday's singles championship winners.

Luz of the Recoelo had a simple task in eliminating J. Fraser of the K.C.C. reaching his points on the 18th head with Fraser totalling only eight.

Luz held the lead from the first few heads and never relaxed his grip.

MAIR BEATEN.

W. Mair, Police skip received a set-back when he was ousted by his club-mate A. R. Clarke. Clarke looked a certain loser when Mair went into a lead of 12-5, but the former recovered cleverly, overhauled his opponent and took the lead with a three. After reaching a dozen points, Mair failed to score on another head, Clarke going out to his points with a series of singles and two's.

PERKINS CONSISTENT.

Steadiness earned T. Perkins, another Police player his game against J. Basto of the Recoelo, and in winning 21-17 achieved a well deserved success.

Very little divided the contestants throughout, but Perkins was constantly the more reliable bowler and proved an adept in extricating himself from unhappy positions.

At the 21st Perkins needed one shot for game, and he obtained this with a beautifully delivered wood on the 22nd head.

TO-DAY'S MATCH.

Only one championship match is arranged for this afternoon. E. C. Fincher, well known all-round sportsman will meet R. F. Lapsley on the Recoelo green.

SPEY ROYAL FIXTURE.

A further fixture has been made in connexion with the Spey Royal Cup competition. On Sunday at the Craighower, starting at 5.30, the Kowloon Dock and Indian Recreation Club rinks will meet.

The Docks team is: R. Lapsley

"BODY-LINE" BOWLING. ARGUMENT IS IRRELEVANT

L.B.W. RULE ROOT CAUSE OF CRICKET TROUBLE

That the critics have placed too much importance to the dangers or unsportsmanship of "body-line" bowling and are ignoring the root cause of the trouble with cricket to-day is the contention of Mr. Howard Marshall in an interesting article in the London Telegraph.

In it Marshall states: County batsmen will dislike this article intensely. A pity, but it cannot be helped; the batsman, it seems to me, has already had his fair share of consideration. Now it is the bowler's turn; and when I speak of bowlers I do not necessarily mean Larwood. It will be difficult, though, to write a general cricket article this summer without bringing Larwood into it somewhere. Body-line bowling, leg-theory, the whole dreary business of the Australian controversy is bound to break out again. That it is a dreary business I think most of us are agreed, and that leg-theory, carried to extremes, is likely to be harmful to cricket is generally accepted.

What I cannot understand is the way most critics, and Australian critics in particular, have approached the controversy. The savage attacks which have been made upon Jardine and Larwood are surely as irrelevant as they are illogical; what is needed is not legislation to restrict leg-theory, but an inquiry into those principles of modern batsmanship which have produced body-line bowling as their natural consequence.

CAUSE OF DULL CRICKET. If, as many of us believe, all is not well with cricket to-day, we must seek the cause instead of bickering childishly over the effects.

The cause, as I see it, lies in the L.B.W. rule, which allows the batsman to use his legs as a second line of defence against balls which pitch outside the wicket. This rule, as Mr. R. H. Lytton argues in his book on the subject, is at the root of all our troubles, from dull cricket and drawn matches to the exaggerated development of leg-theory attack.

Unfortunately, the principle of covering-up in defence is now firmly established, and we find even some batsmen sticking their right leg across as a protection against the break-back of balls outside the off-stump. There is nothing wrong or contrary to the spirit of the game," wrote that distinguished batsman, Mr. D. J. Knight, in the Badminton cricket volume, "in bringing the legs back together in front of the wicket and behind the bat to act as an extra defence, so long as the ball has pitched off the wicket."

"SHABBY." Now there is something radically wrong here. Older cricketers had other views, and that great player, William Beldham, who was born in 1760, is quoted by the Rev. James Pycroft as saying: "The law of L.B.W. was not made or wanted till King, one of our best hitters, was shabby enough to get his leg in the way and take advantage of the bowler."

Shabby—that is the significant word, and to my mind it sums up the whole situation. Cricket is a game intended to be fought out with two weapons, the ball and the bat, and when the batsman introduces his pads deliberately as an additional weapon he is taking a shabby advantage of his opponent.

This, at any rate, was still the general attitude fifty years ago, and in 1887, at the first meeting of the County Cricket Council, Lord Harris said that "gentlemen of the older cricket school were decidedly of opinion that some alteration was required in the law of L.B.W."

As a result of this meeting a sub-committee was appointed to inquire into the matter, and they passed a resolution to the effect that "the practice of deliberately defending the wicket with the person instead of the bat is contrary to the spirit of the game, and inconsistent with strict fairness, and the M.C.C. will discontinue and prevent this practice by every means in their power."

Unhappily, the M.C.C. failed to translate their strong words into action, and in order to show how the deliberate use of the legs has increased I take the following table from Mr. Lytton's book:

Year	1870	1880	1890	1900	1910	1920	1929
Runs	1772	3792	6702	7019	8228	8528	8528
Wickets	44	219	451	921	957	957	957
Percentage	1 in 40	1 in 17	1 in 14	1 in 8	1 in 8	1 in 8	1 in 8

The deductions from this table are obvious; the whole technique of batsmanship has changed since systematic covering-up was introduced, and the bowler not only has to beat the bat, but the batsman's legs as well. The results have been disastrous, and are becoming an increasing menace to the existence of first-class cricket. The logical outcome of the bowler's attempts to overcome his difficulties have been the introduction of googlies and leg-theory, and the consequences of the batsman's use of his pads have been the development of a two-eyed stance, the decline of stroke play, huge scores and drawn matches.

RULE MUST BE REVISED. County cricket to-day is, in my opinion, moribund, but it would seem encouragement and batsmen were forced to make proper use of their bats.

We must, in short, return to the principle, if not the wording, of the original L.B.W. law of 1774, which stated that "the striker is out.... if he puts his leg before the wicket with a design to stop the ball and actually prevent the ball from hitting it."

There are those who maintain that this would put too great a strain upon the umpires, but under the existing rule they have to decide whether the ball pitched between the wickets, and of this responsibility they would be relieved.

Admittedly the modern batsman would complain bitterly if any such alteration were contemplated. He would have to adapt himself to an entirely new technique, and his average might suffer severely. There would be no harm in this, however, for lower scoring would mean fewer drawn matches, and the County Championship would come to life again.

When we consider also the revival which would inevitably follow in the wake of bowling and stroke play, we must surely agree that it is high time the M.C.C. carried out their forty-year-old threat to discountenance and prevent the use of the legs.

Football In Midsummer

NAVY LOSE TO COMBINED CHINESE

In a scrappy game the Combined team of South China and Tung Hwa players beat the Navy in a friendly football match at Caroline Hill yesterday by two matches to nil.

Injuries to several of the Tung Hwa team who have been playing in exhibition matches in Manila caused a re-arrangement in the Chinese team, and five local players turned out.

The Chinese were always on top and only wretched marksmanship kept their score from mounting up.

Tam Kong-pak scored early on in the game and Chan Hung-kwong added a second before the interval.

Although the Navy enjoyed a greater share of the exchanges in the second half, they were never very dangerous and the match petered out without addition to the score.

Teams:—Chinese.—Luk Chung-yau, Lee Ting-sang, Lee Ning, Leung Lu-chan, Leung Wing-chui, To Hoi-yuen, Yeung Sing-yick, Tse Chow-ling, Tam Kong-pak, Chan Hung-kwong and Man Cheung-wah.

R. Navy.—Woodman, Fogrest, Matthews, Blair, Richards, Symonds, Redler, Usher, Northey, Timberlake and Bates.

RUGBY PLAYERS' INSURANCE

COMPENSATION FOR LOSS OF INCOME

In addition to the new play-writer rule, a revised scheme for the insurance of players against injury will be brought before the Rugby Union at the annual meeting in London on June 23. The scheme provides that a club or organisation may arrange to pay compensation for loss of income and/or medical expenses incurred at practice or in matches during the season.

No claim for compensation will be admissible where there is no actual loss of income, and the injured player may not receive in the form of compensation an amount exceeding three-fourths of the actual loss, or 10s. per week-day, whichever is less.

AFTER 4,000 YEARS

EGYPTIAN TOMB UNEARTHED

Cairo, May 23.
A large and very fine Mastaba (Pharaonic tomb) belonging to the Chief Priest of Ptah at Memphis, with the burial walls of the chamber covered with no fewer than 250 columns of hieroglyphic texts, has been discovered by an expedition of the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York at Lisht, in Upper Egypt. This is the site of the Pyramids of the first two Kings of the Twelfth Dynasty (2,000 B.C.).

The name of the owner of this magnificent tomb is Senwosret-Ankh. There is an unusually large chapel. The hieroglyphic texts are incised in limestone and painted in blue.

Meanwhile, at Giza, the Tombs of the Seven Sons of Chephren, the builder of the Second Pyramid, who married the daughter of Cheops, have been discovered by Professor Selim Hassan, excavating on behalf of the Egyptian University. He has also discovered the tomb intact of a high dignitary of the Fifth Dynasty, about 2,500 B.C.

MR. HENDERSON'S PEACE PRIZE

CARNEGIE AWARD SURPRISE

Geneva.
Mr. Arthur Henderson, who has been awarded a Carnegie prize, value £2,200, for "promoting peace" was recently, interviewed by Reuters' correspondent. He said that the intimation that the board of directors of the Carnegie Foundation had been good enough to award him the prize, came as a complete surprise.

"Naturally it gives me and undoubtedly will give my family great gratification that my work for peace, and efforts as president of the Disarmament Conference should have been recognised in this way," declared Mr. Henderson.

The award was made in recognition of Mr. Henderson's work for the cause of peace and disarmament and for the "energy, talent and impartiality" which he has displayed since becoming President of the Disarmament Conference.—Reuters.

GOLD & SILVER DISCOVERY

BOSNIA PEASANTS' TREASURE TROVE

Belgrade.
Peasants digging up the roots of ancient oak trees near Mashtina, Bosnia, found an earthen pot filled with gold and silver coins. The pot weighed twenty pounds.

The peasants took it to the police and claimed one-third as treasure trove. The pot was found to contain old Roman and Greek coins of great value.

When the police went to investigate the scene of the find they discovered that 150 peasants had assembled and were digging as hard as they could around the spot where the coins had been found.

Many further discoveries were made, including ancient marble slabs, some bearing inscriptions, the foundations of several houses and other buildings, several vases, weapons, implements and other objects, proving that a large and prosperous Roman settlement had occupied the site at one time.

RUSSIA BUYS GRAIN

FAILURE OF FARM POLICY

PEASANTS RESENT "COLLECTIVISM"

Berlin, May 22.
The failure of the Soviet agricultural policy to provide the extra supplies of food required for the increased population, and, above all, for the millions of new industrial workers drawn to the towns from rural areas to help out the Five Year plan, has once more transformed the Soviet Union from a grain-selling to a grain-buying State.

According to reports that have reached the Boersen Courier, Arcos has been ordered to start purchasing grain, while the grain-selling department of the Paris Soviet trade delegation is in process of liquidation.

The cargoes of four Canadian wheat steamers on the high seas are reported to have been bought up and the steamers directed to change their course from London to Leningrad.

Further purchases are to be made from America and are to include other grain besides wheat.

A grain commission is to meet in Moscow this week to decide how much grain must be purchased this year.

The Moscow wireless station recently admitted that the grain situation in the Ukraine was so bad that in several districts the last reserves were eaten during the winter, and not even seed corn was left by sowing time.

ABSURD OVER-ESTIMATE.

The Soviet policy of "collectivising" the small farmers into enormous (nominally) co-operative units and of setting up big State farms, significantly called corn factories, had two aims—proletarianisation of agriculture and the re-establishment of big farm units, from which it was hoped that surpluses for the rapidly expanding towns could more easily be collected than from small farms.

The failure of the scheme in the last respect was due to an absurd over-estimate of the possibility of rapidly mechanising agriculture in Russia, and to an under-estimate of the conservative resistance of peasants to proletarianisation, which gained new strength from the enforced organisation of the peasants in large masses.

The Soviet Government has not changed its aims; it has only reduced the size of farming units somewhat. The peasants are being offered more of the manufactured goods that they want, and at the

QUESTIONNAIRE SENT FROM UNIVERSITY

The Department of Psychology at the University of London is issuing a questionnaire, which consists of 32 "propositions" dealing with progressive thought, on which the recipient is required to record his or her attitude. They include such varied subjects as sexual freedom, birth control, Communism, Anarchism, abortion, gymnosophy, refusal of military service and sterilisation.

Accompanying it is a printed form signed by J. C. Flugel (Assistant Professor of Psychology) and Prynus Hopkins (Hon. Lecturer in Psychology).

The statement reads: "A research is being conducted by some members of the staff of this College into the overlap between various 'progressive,' 'advanced,' or 'unorthodox' movements, i.e., the question how far those who sympathise with one such movement tend to support (or to oppose) certain other movements. The investigators are not concerned with the merits or defects of any such movements, but solely with the facts concerning the above-mentioned overlap."

Mr. Prynus Hopkins told a Press representative that the idea was conceived eighteen months ago. "A preliminary test was carried out on the students of the University," he said, "and as a result we decided to make this investigation. The results will be carefully studied and every combination of opinion will be worked out."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Here is another of those interesting hands from Phil Leon of Cleveland, Ohio. He has the uncanny ability to discover and make many of the unusual plays of bridge.

Don't bother to bid the hand—just look it over and see if you can make a grand slam in diamonds, which was the contract in which Mr. Leon found himself when the bidding began with two clubs by South. (They were using the forcing two club bid. While the writer does not believe in the efficiency of this bid, it is still used by some players.)

North with less than an ace and a king must make a minimum response of two diamonds—not because he has diamonds, but because that is the negative response. South then bid two hearts and now Mr. Leon in the North bid three diamonds to show a biddable diamond suit.

South bid three hearts, Mr. Leon went to four diamonds, South bid six diamonds and Mr. Leon felt that, with his ace of spades and queen-jack of clubs, he was justified in going to seven.

The Play

A club was opened by East, dummy winning with the ace. The ace and king of diamonds were immediately cashed and on the second diamond East showed out, discarding a club.

Mr. Leon then cashed the ace and king of hearts in dummy, discarding his losing club.

Mr. Leon has four trump to the queen-ten, while West holds the jack and eight. In order to pick up the jack of diamonds, Mr. Leon must get rid of two diamonds so as to reduce the hand to the same number of trump as that held by West.

He led a small club and trumped. Then he played a small spade, winning in dummy with the jack. He returned a small heart. West, of course, must refuse to trump and should discard a spade.

Mr. Leon trumped with the nine of diamonds and then led another spade, winning in dummy with the queen. He now swung the queen of hearts, and West was helpless.

He must not trump or declarer would overtrump, so all that he could do was to discard a club and declarer discarded the ten of spades. When the eight of hearts was led, West must discard the king of clubs and declarer discarded the ace of spades.

The lead was in dummy—West held the jack and eight of diamonds and declarer the queen and ten. No matter what card was led from dummy, West must trump, declarer overtrumped and picked up the other trump.

By employing a double coup Mr. Leon had made his contract of seven diamonds.

THE AMERICAN PROPOSALS

secondly, the ultimate restoration of gold was demanded.

Conditions necessary to Great Britain's return to gold were: firstly, a rise in the level of prices so as to restore the equilibrium between prices and costs; secondly, the removal of the conditions which caused its breakdown; thirdly, the greatest possible prevention of the fluctuation of the purchasing power of gold.

Dealing with exchange restrictions, Mr. Chamberlain urged the Conference to deal with these questions through, among other things, the resumption of normal international lending and advised reduction of excessive customs tariffs. The protective element of any tariff should not exceed what was necessary to put the domestic producers on an equal footing with the foreigner. Great Britain was ready to co-operate in multilateral action for tariff reduction. But reduction of tariffs was best achievable by a series of bilateral agreements.

Such reductions could be given the fullest effect by the application of most favoured nation clauses, but such clauses could not be applied unless the nations receiving their advantages themselves were prepared to adopt a reasonable attitude towards lowering tariffs.

Attacks Subsidy Plan.

There should be a clear distinction between the arbitrarily imposed and protective quota (which should be progressively abolished) and quotas imposed by international agreement, he declared. Governmental subsidies, particularly to shipping, should be reduced and eventually abolished by international agreement, he concluded. When the British minister had ended, he was loudly applauded.

Anxious for Reduction.

M. Hymans said that Belgium considered monetary stabilisation essential to the re-establishment of the international gold standard, the normal functioning of which Belgium had done nothing to hinder.

Belgium was ready to collaborate towards a gradual abolition of all quantitative restrictions on imports. It was necessary that the small powers should have commercial freedom to live and it was logical and legitimate that the most favoured nation clause should be abandoned.

Mr. Cordell Hull, American delegate, and M. Litvinoff, of Soviet Russia, are speaking at the afternoon session.

The Hermit Policy

Mr. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, delivered his postponed speech this afternoon. He was listened to with the same keen interest as was Mr. Chamberlain earlier in the day. Beginning with a reference to the "panic ridden world" seeking leadership from the Conference, he proceeded to comment on the attitude of all nations who, ignoring all realities, strenuously pursued a policy of economic isolation, each futilely and foolishly striving to lead a hermit's life.

Drawing a gloomy picture of the world's chaotic experiences in recent years, he declared that its peoples were worse off and more insecure than twelve years ago. The Conference should proclaim that economic nationalism, as imposed upon various nations, was a discredited policy. It must turn aside from those who insist that the world continue this discredited policy.

While each nation, to a moderate extent, could restore conditions by suitable steps, there was an equal necessity for an international economic programme.

A Readjustment.

Mr. Hull recommended a policy of gradual and careful readjustment of excessive tariffs and other trade barriers to a moderate level,

CHINESE INDUSTRY.

MR. TSENG FLIES IN "HOME-MADE" PLANE

Shanghai, June 14.

A new page in the history of Chinese aeronautical development was recorded yesterday afternoon when Mr. Tseng Yi-ching, Head of the aeronautical establishment of the Naval Ministry went up in the sea-plane, "Kiang Fong," built by himself in preparation for a trip through seven provinces. The plane circled the city for more than two hours, distributing handbills encouraging the Chinese people to build their own aeroplanes.—Router.

which were not contemplated and unreasonable; adjustment of excessive competitive imports or monopolistic price advantages at home. A preliminary step towards co-operation would be an immediate general adherence to a tariff truce. The Conference must also face the problem of a permanent international monetary standard and lay down the proper function of metal, gold and silver, in operation on such a standard. Coincidentally, measures should be taken to remove restrictions on foreign exchange. The American delegation was prepared to offer concrete suggestions on all these questions.

The Soviet Speaks.

It was obvious that both the man and his speech attracted curious interest when Mr. Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, took the floor.

Speaking in fluent English, he devoted a large portion of his statement to a comparison of the chaotic conditions of the rest of the world with conditions in Russia, which, he declared, were practically free of all symptoms from which others suffered. Such things as

NOTES SUPPLIED BY
THE THEATRES.

Leo Carrillo recently took the longest bath in his life. He was in the tub six hours, but not for sanitary purposes. It was all for a scene in Paramount's "The Broken Wing," now showing at the Queen's Theatre.

The tub in which Carrillo took his protracted bath was a wine press and the water was especially heated for him.

Leo Carrillo is one of five actors with Spanish names and lineage who have important speaking parts in "The Broken Wing." Every effort was made to give the picture an authentic touch of realism, in its cast of characters as well as in its scenic atmosphere. Carrillo played on the stage in a recent presentation of the drama, the same part he plays in the picture.

"The Greek Had a Word for Them"

Years ago, fifteen years ago, to be exact, there was a very pretty little blonde child with long golden curls who was always cropping up in pictures. She was one of those very pretty, very innocent movie-children, and when she disappeared from the screen, it might have been taken for granted that she had gone to heaven because she was so good.

But she has lately reappeared in the person of Madge Evans and anyone who had that "too good to live" idea has only to see her as one of the three merry maids of Broadway in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Greek Had a Word for Them" to realize that it wasn't that at all. This United Artists picture is showing at the King's Theatre.

If you want to remember what Madge Evans looked like back when she was a child star, just remember the small girl with muffs and ringlets who sits on top of the cake of Fairy Soap. That was Madge Evans. It is Madge Evans no more. Nowdays she is a tall, slim young woman, still blonde, but blonde in a totally different way, a way that enables her to play her gold-digging role in "The Greek Had a Word for Them" to the taste of every millionaire in the picture.

"Arsene Lupin"

The appearance together of John Barrymore, and his equally illustrious brother, Lionel, in "Arsene Lupin," which will be shown at the Oriental Theatre on Friday and Saturday, is a cause for jubilee for those film-goers who have been looking for something different and above the average in the way of screen fare.

Here we have two of the cinema's most expert proponents of the art of dramatic acting, brilliant characterization and sophisticated comedy, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer may be congratulated on providing the two stars with a vehicle in every way worthy of their talents. For "Arsene Lupin," the engrossing, often intensely dramatic, but always extremely amusing story of the suave and debonair thief who poses as a French nobleman and leads an infuriated and bewildered detective on a merry chase about the haunts of Paris, has just those elements of rapid-action plot movement, romantic love interest and smart humour which the two celebrated Barrymore brothers are so well equipped to handle.

"Clear All Wires"

Stage actors coming to the screen should know the work of a film cutter. It gives more knowledge of movements, camera angles, the reasons for closeups and such detail than months of experience otherwise, according to Lee Tracy, debonair hero of "Clear All Wires," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film of the Broadway stage hit, which is showing from Sunday at the Queen's Theatre.

Locales, all over the world, only talked about in the stage play, are

DARWINIAN
A "DREAM"LESSON OF THE MICROSCOPE

The Missing Link problem and the theory of man's evolution, from the ape stage were criticised in a paper read to the Victoria Institute, London by Dr. Albert Fleischmann, Professor of Zoology and comparative Anatomy in the University of Erlangen (Bavaria).

Darwin, he said, would have abandoned his dream of a single great genealogical tree for all species of animals, if he had lived to see the later advances in animal anatomy.

Darwin's theory had not been confirmed by the discoveries of anatomical research, yet evolutionists still searched for "ancestors" in the grave-yards of the past, and arranged fossil fragments—leg bones, teeth of skulls—of various extinct species of horse into hypothetical series.

A MILLION SPECIES.

To-day scientists had classified approximately one million animal species. These could not be held to have developed from one genealogical tree.

The microscope had made possible the detail work of their anatomical research. They had discovered that all animal structures were developed from special layers which recalled the annual rings of trees.

"The microscope disclosed the fact," continued Dr. Fleischmann, "that all the body layers are made up of cells—tiny little building stones from 0.07 to 0.1 mm. in length.

"Many great transformations are seen to take place; a tiny double cell, the fertilised egg, from 0.5 to 0.2 mm. in diameter, grows into an adult creature. The investigation of this marvel is far more profitable than making unverified guesses regarding the genealogical changes of long-extinct animal species of former ages, which are only known to us from bits of their skeletons."

Living bodies could not be regarded as results of little accidents,

shown in the picture. Elaborate research reproduced a Moscow hotel overlooking the Kremlin, the headquarters of the secret police into whose hands Tracy, as the American news correspondent, eventually falls, and the Red Army.

Tracy plays a fast-talking, energetic and irresponsible newspaperman who steals his employer's chorus girl "sweetie," is fired, tries to "frame" a big story by staging a shooting to get back on the payroll, narrowly escapes killing the Commissioner of Police and is himself hit in Moscow's hero, then is arrested when the police learn of the plot, and in this and other thrilling episodes in other parts of the world goes through comical troubles with women, armies, police and other enemies.

"Second Hand Wife"

The most beautiful legs in Hollywood are displayed in one scene of "Second Hand Wife" coming to the King's on Sunday. More than 500 pairs were inspected by Hamilton MacFadden and his assistants before the final selections were made.

In the film, lower extremities are observed under 30 or more decks in Hongkong, 12th June, 1933.

An office scene during the early part of the picture. The camera sweeps across the half-circle of symmetrical limbs, here and there marked by a comic pair. A careful observer will note, however, that there are no comic legs in the front row.

Sally Eilers and Ralph Bellamy portray the leading roles in the picture which depicts the story of a business man who, neglected by his wife, falls in love with his secretary. How the man and the girl work out their problem forms the basis of what is said to be one of the most dramatic and entertaining stories yet to reach the screen.

"Second Hand Wife" is an adaptation of Kathleen Norris' latest novel and MacFadden not only directed the picture but prepared the story for the screen.

SIX PASSENGERS OVERBOARD

BELIEVED TO BE WAR RECRUITS

Six Chinese passengers jumped overboard from an out-going steamer as the vessel was in Lamma Channel yesterday. They were picked up and returned to the Colony by a fishing junk.

The six men are believed to be Chinese Army recruits, who exercised the privilege of changing their minds after accepting the terms of enlistment.

Their case is being investigated by the Secretariat of Chinese Affairs.

TENSION IN EUROPE

AUSTRO-GERMAN QUARREL RELATIONS VERY STRAINED

Vienna, June 14.

Official relations between Austria and Germany are exceedingly strained as a result of the Habsicht incident and the German reprisal.

Dr. Wasserbaeck, the press attache at the Austrian Legation in Berlin, who was ordered to leave German territory immediately, has been appointed Secretary of the Austrian Legation in London by Dr. Dollfuss, the Chancellor, and is proceeding to London immediately.

This journey may have something to do with the decision of Dr. Dollfuss to remain in London, though there are rumours that he has been consulting with members of the British Cabinet and that the good offices of Britain may be employed to ease the tension between Germany and Austria.

Habsicht RELEASED.
Herr Habsicht, the press attache to the German Legation in Vienna, whose arrest caused the tension, has been released. He left Linz in a motor-car and was accompanied to the frontier by an Austrian police official.

Vienna activities against the Nazis continue and scores of arrests have been made, though some have since been released.—
Reuter.

NEW TERRITORIES PRODUCE

FURTHER ENQUIRY TO BE MADE

Replying to Mr. Braga's proposal for an enquiry into the marketing of New Territories produce, the Colonial Secretary in the Legislative Council to-day, said:—

A similar proposal was considered by Government in 1931, when the question of facilities for the transport and marketing of New Territory products was very thoroughly examined, and the conclusion was that existing facilities in this direction appeared, generally speaking, to be adequate.

Government is however prepared to accept the Honourable Member's suggestion, and appoint a Committee further to investigate the question.

"LENIN AIR FLEET"

NEW AIRSHIPS

Moscow.
Work on the "Lenin air fleet"
to consist of seven airships—is to start this year and, according to programme, will be completed by 1937.
This is the latest evidence of the faith put by the Soviet Union in lighter-than-air craft.

According to the Tass news agency, "the tollers of the U.S.S.R.
have already subscribed the equivalent of $4,000,000 towards the cost of building these large airships for the "Lenin fleet."
Russia's first semi-rigid airship will be ready shortly to take the air. Its gas volume will be 2,150 cubic metres and it will have a range of 450 miles at a cruising speed of fifty miles an hour.
A second, slightly larger, semi-rigid airship will be ready in June this year and a third before Christmas.—Reuter.
